Concerning Mike de Pike. Kresge and Jefferson. Who Got the Cash? Lindbergh's Next Flight.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

(Copyright, 1927)

A CHICAGO resort, described as a "vice hotel," is thoroughly bombed, despite a protecting iron door. Police suspect that "Mike De Pike" Heitler, recently in the penitentiary, was bombed for trying to "muscle in on the vice racket in Chicago." "Mike De Pike's" desire was natural, for that "racket," which includes bootlegging, gambling and vice, takes in all told $75,000,000 a year.

THE police know Chicago's leading gansters, bootleggers, hijackers, gambling house keepers, vice resort keepers, etc., intimately. Why not lock them up, as they are identified and keep them locked up.

IN COLORADO miners are locked up merely because they belong to the I. W. W., and in California an educated woman accused of no crime except communistic political opinions, not approved by the majority, was sent to jail for many years.

A CHICAGO police commissioner recently said that more than half the police force engaged in bootlegging. That, perhaps, accounts for liberty enjoyed by recognized gangsters and murderers. There should be some way to make organized crime as dangerous for the criminals as it is for the public.

S. S. KRESGE, of Detroit, head of the five-and-ten-cent chain stores, gives $500,000 to a prohibition fund. There are various opinions on the way to achieve temperance. Thomas Jefferson, who wrote the Declaration of Independence, would have given the $500,000 to establish breweries and plant vineyards for production of light wine and beer. He believed that would conquer whisky, which, he said, killed half the population in his day and ruined their families. It wasn't as bad as bootleg whisky and killed slowly, if surely.

DOCUMENTS from the archives of the Mexican government show that $1,200,000 were set aside for three members of the United States Senate, whose names, of course, are not published, although they appear in the Mexican documents. An investigation will doubtless show how much of these appropriations went to middlemen, how much was kept by those that ordered the payments and perhaps used conspicuous names to hide their own stealing.

LINDBERGH'S next long flight will be from Washington, D. C., to Mexico City, on the invitation of President Calles of Mexico. He will fly in the same machine that took him across the Atlantic. The engine in the "Spirit of St. Louis," which has carried Lindbergh over thousands of miles in the United States since his return from abroad, has not been overhauled since he started for Paris, although carefully inspected after each flight.

THE United States government ought to enlist the services of Lindbergh to instruct American fliers, and enlighten those responsible for our air defense. If another war ever comes it will seem very extraordinary to future historians, writing of American cities bombed and gassed, that the richest cities in the world should have gone along without adequate air defense. Not one of our cities is protected today by anything but distance. Coast defense guns and battleships are obsolete, anti-aircraft guns absolutely inefficient. We spend $600,000,000 a year for "defense" and have none.

THE President recommends a ten-year plan for Mississippi Valley flood prevention involving $296,100,000. Altogether $25,000,000 would be spent the first year and $30,000,000 a year thereafter. Why not spend every year as much as can be spent wisely to hurry the work, rather than risk, in the course of ten years, another flood that might cost in destruction more than the total appropriation. Secretary Mellon could borrow the money for three per cent, if he couldn't take it out of the surplus. Haste is important, floods don't wait.

WARDEN LAWES of Sing Sing prison is inundated with requests to witness the killing of Ruth Snyder in the electric chair. It might facilitate police work to finger print all that send such requests. They may, however, be disappointed. New York's governor takes pride in his state and knows its glory will not be increased by tying a helpless woman, however wicked, into an electric chair, the top of her head shaved, the calf of her leg exposed to the deadly electrodes, and then killing her.

The state refrains from executing clergymen, however unworthy, because of the sacredness of their calling. It might also respect the sacredness of motherhood, however unworthy the individual.

MRS. MEDILL McCORMICK, widow of the late Senator from Illinois, will go to Washington as congressman-at-large from her state. A good thing for the state, and Congress. The Hearst Chicago newspapers are supporting Mrs. McCormick, so is Mayor "Big Bill" Thompson, and Vice President Dawes. All this would interest the late Mark Hanna. Mrs. McCormick's father, if he could know about it.

Is There A Santa Claus?

LORRAINE SNYDER

OSSINING, N. Y., Dec. 10.—Lorraine Snyder, 10-year-old daughter of Ruth Snyder, has written to Santa Claus to ask him to bring back her mother to her as a Christmas gift. The letter was shown yesterday to Ruth in the death house by her mother, Mrs. Josephine Brown. Ruth wept as she read it.

"I want to ask you, Dear Santa Claus, to bring my darling mother home to me for Christmas, wrote Lorraine. "I want no toys, books or candy."

"That's all I want. I'm so lonesome without her. I have no brothers, sisters, father or mother to visit me. I'm in a boarding school, my darling grandmother, uncle and aunt bring me lots of nice things, but I want my mother.

"Please, Santa Claus, bring her and nothing else. If you have any toys for me, please give them to some poor children. Maybe they will pray for my mother to come to me. I am praying hard. Please, Santa Claus, you pray for her too, for all I want in the world is my darling mother.

"Merry Christmas to you, Dear Santa Claus. From your little friend,

"LORRAINE SNYDER."

CALL MINE PEACE PARLEY

DAVIS SEEKS TRUCE

By Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—With a hope for "peace in the bituminous coal industry by Christmas," Secretary of Labor James J. Davis yesterday called a conference of soft coal operators and labor leaders to end the eight months' strike of 150,000 miners.

He set the conference for next Tuesday, at the labor department's offices here.

Davis said he acted "with the knowledge of the President."

His appeal for a truce followed pleas to Mr. Coolidge three weeks ago by President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, and President John L. Lewis, of the United Mine Workers, who told the President 700,000 persons faced the winter "on the verge of actual starvation."

Soft coal operators of Western Pennsylvania, Northern West Virginia and Ohio, and the operators' associations in those areas, were invited to attend the conference or send representatives.

The mine workers, fighting for retention of the higher Jacksonville scale, will be represented by one official from each district.

"The meeting will be for frank discussion of problems affecting the mining industry, with the object of bringing about if possible, a satisfactory and peaceful situation." Davis said in night letters to operators and union heads.

A settlement of the coal mining dispute in this section seemed very remote this afternoon.

Executives of coal producing companies in the Pittsburgh district held conferences today to consider the in-

Teacher Hits Teacher

GERTRUDE GABLE

Miss Gable, 20, Washington, Pa., was struck by an automobile as she walked along the National highway to Laboratory school, one mile from Washington, where she teaches. The car was driven by another teacher, Mrs. Ethel McIlvaine, of Washington, also on her way to school. Miss Grable, hurled 30 feet from the roadway, is in a serious condition in the Washington Hospital. Mrs. McIlvaine is being held under $1,000 bail for failure to stop. She said a frost-encrusted windshield obscured her vision and she was unaware she had struck anyone. The teachers are close personal friends.

Duty of U. S. Senate To Fully Investigate Mexican Documents

It is extremely important that a committee of the United States Senate should investigate the truth of the statements contained in the unquestionably authentic documents of the Mexican government revealed to the people of this country by the Hearst publications.

These documents contain evidence of an attempt on the part of representatives of the Mexican government to convey money in large sums to certain representatives of the American government. But there is no evidence that this money was ever received by the representatives of the American government mentioned in these documents. There is no evidence that those large amounts of money ever got any farther than the pockets of certain intermediaries.

The Hearst publications, therefore, have eliminated all names of alleged recipients of these funds, being uninclined to place any confidence in the allegation of Mexican corruptionists, and wholly unwilling to run the risk of doing injury to men of good repute in our government.

Nevertheless, the documents do make these allegations, and the documents are genuine documents from the Mexican governmental files.

Therefore, it is the duty of the United States Senate to investigate these allegations carefully; to summon all possible witnesses; to weigh carefully all evidence; and to decide how much, if any, credence can be given to the written word of these Mexican corruptionists.

Whether the names contained in these documents shall ever be published must depend entirely upon the decision of the United States Senate. The Hearst publications consider that the responsibility is too great for them to assume.

Loses Cash He 'Won' on State

C. J. Schinninger, 40, Altoona, the only man in these broad lands who won some $8,000 by "betting" State College would beat Pitt on Thanksgiving Day, parted with $2,000 of his winnings in Morals Court today.

Z. H. Breman, 638 Morrowfield avenue, former Pitt student, testified he was one of those who was trimmed by Schinninger to the extent of a $2,000 certified check. When he went to the Hotel Schenley to collect Schinninger had departed, Breman testified.

Schinninger returned the check today. He is being held while authorities round up other Pitt men who were victimized.

PRISONER IS SHOT TRYING TO ESCAPE

In the custody of two special policemen en route to the Sharpsburg jail, W. J. Rosser 37, of 109 Second street, Juniata, Pa., leaped from the automobile in which he was a prisoner and boarded the caboose of a moving freight train in a hail of bullets last night, only to be arrested later, wounded, in the yard of the Fort Pitt Brewing Company, Sharpsburg.

The escape occurred when the car in which the three were riding stopped at the Thirteenth Street railroad crossing to permit a freight to pass.

Rosser was arrested yesterday in the downtown district on charges of larceny of an automobile and passing worthless checks.

Disclosures Today

Official Mexican document in the possession of the Hearst newspapers and published for the first time today reveal that:

President Calles feared a break in diplomatic relations between the United States and Mexico and subsequent intervention and war.

In March, 1927, the Mexican treasury was in such a condition that Calles balked at ordering the payment of $250,000 to a U. S. Senator. Instead, he ordered $100,000 paid.

By JOHN PAGE.

(Copyright, 1927, by Washington Herald.)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—The Sun-Telegraph and associated Hearst papers today publish official correspondence between President Calles and other high functionaries of the Mexican Government on the subjects of a possible "rupture of relations," "armed intervention," and a proposed payment of $100,000 to a member of the United States Senate for "pro-Mexican propaganda."

This correspondence includes an original Calles letter, written last January to Arturo M. Elias, Mexican Financial Agent in New York, requesting Elias, his half-brother, to investigate and report to him on the possibilities of a "rupture of relations" with the United States.

PROBE OF MEXICO OPENS

By FRASER EDWARDS.

Universal Service Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—A speedy and searching investigation into the amazing charges, published in the Hearst newspapers, of attempts by the Mexican government to interfere in the domestic and international affairs of the United States was ordered unanimously by the Senate late yesterday.

The resolution of inquiry, sponsored by Senator David A. Reed of Pennsylvania, was directed specifically at the charge that Mexican officials attempted to influence four United States senators with huge sums of money. The names of the senators were not revealed in the article, published yesterday in the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph and associated newspapers.

The action of the Senate was as dramatic as it was brief and decisive. It came on the heels of a vote to exclude Senator-elect William S. Vare of Pennsylvania, who is un-

10 Years for Widow, Beach

MAYS LANDING, N. J., Dec. 10.—(INS.)—Mrs. Margaret Lilliendahl and her alleged paramour, Willis Beach, white-haired poultry farmer, today were sentenced to 10 years at hard labor for the killing of the woman's aged husband, Dr. William Lilliendahl. They were convicted by a jury last Thursday of "voluntary manslaughter," which, under the New Jersey laws, involves a maximum sentence of 10 years' imprisonment or $1,000 fine or both. There is no minimum set.

Mrs. Lilliendahl had to be assisted to her feet by Attorney Phillips, her counsel, when she rose to receive sentence. As Justice Campbell slowly pronounced the words, "hard labor for 10 years," the widow's shoulders heaved. She breathed with apparent difficulty then burst into tears. Beach's face remained impassive.

The lightest sentence possible would have been a fine.

Contrary to previous announcements, Robert McCarter, counsel for Mrs. Lilliendahl, did not make a motion for a new trial on the ground of newly discovered evidence. He told the court that his evidence was not yet completed, and that therefore he would wait. He can make the application any time within six months. It had been intimated by defense counsel that they had obtained a confession from two Negroes. It has been the defense contention throughout that the aged doctor was slain by Negroes, who also attacked Mrs. Lilliendahl.

"If your honor please," said McCarter, "after the jury returned a verdict in this case we asked for time, before imposition of sentence, to investigate certain material information which had come to our attention. We have not to date been able to crystallize that information in such a form as to be able to present it to your honor."

McCart then explained that he would make the plea for a new trial later. Edison Hedges, counsel for Beach, pleaded for a light sentence, stating that what "would be light punishment for many another man would be very heavy punishment indeed for this man," because of Beach's 57 years.

Beach was then asked to stand. He stared quietly at the bench while Justice Campbell pronounced sentence.

"Beach," the judge said, "a jury has found you guilty of the crime of voluntary manslaughter, and the sentence of the court is that you be confined in state's prison, at hard labor, for a period of 10 years."

Beach, hands folded before him, stood very straight. He maintained his self-possession throughout the ordeal and sat down afterward without a sign of emotion.

VARE'S FATE LEFT UP TO SENATE SLUSH FUND COMMITTEE

DENY OATH TO PENNA. SENATOR

By Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—The Senate door yesterday swung shut in the face of Senator-elect William S. Vare of Pennsylvania, just as it was slammed against Senator-elect Frank L. Smith of Illinois, two days ago.

By a vote of almost two to one—55 to 31—the Senate denied Vare the right to take the oath of office and sent his credentials to the Reed slush fund committee for further investigation. The latter action was voted 56 to 30.

A few minutes later, Senator James A. Reed of Missouri, offered a resolution not only to revive his committee, which investigated the Pennsylvania and Illinois election scandals but to confirm its authority during the recess of Congress, which was disputed.

Senator David A. Reed of Pennsylvania, who led the fight for the seating of Vare, objected to the latter part of the resolution and the matter went over until Monday with indications that it will pass. Senator Jim Reed, however, called a preliminary meeting of his committee for tomorrow.

The Senate split on much the same lines on seating Vare as it did on Smith. The test came on a substitute resolution by Senator David A. Reed. It proposed to administer the oath to Vare without regard to his right to retain his seat and to refer his credentials to the privileges and elections committee for investigation and report to the Senate within 60 days.

Five Democrats—Blease and Smith of S. C., Broussard and Bansdell of La., and Steck of Iowa—voted with 28 Republicans to administer the oath. Fifteen Republicans and Shipstead, Farmer-Laborite, of Minnesota, lined up with 39 Democrats to deny the privilege.

Senators Brookhart of Iowa, Republican, and Overman of North Carolina, Democrat, who voted to seat Smith, cast their ballots against Vare. The anti-Vare ranks were strengthened by Senators Norbeck of South Dakota and Robinson of Indiana, who were absent when the Smith vote was taken.

Another attempt by Dave Reed to have Vare sworn in and then have his credentials sent to the slush fund committee was defeated by an identical vote. Then came the vote on the resolution by Senator Norris of Nebraska, to deny Vare the oath and refer his credentials. Senator Curtis of Nebraska, Republican leader, voted for that procedure just as he had in the Smith case, after voting to seat him.

RELIEF IN COLD WAVE HERE

A temperature of 15 to 20 degrees above zero prevailed this morning, with the possibility of the mercury rising as high as 25 degrees during the afternoon, according to Forecaster W. S. Brotaman. The cold snap has been broken and there is no sign of any immediate return of the frigid weather, the weather man said.

The official low mark of the cold snap was 6.6 degrees above zero, this being the low record for the season. There was considerable suffering in this district.

There was real rivalry between Miss Beulah Cook (left), and Miss Kathryn O'Donnell (right), over the demure little freshie in the center, Miss Miriam Whitney. They glared at each other in "real he-man fashion" when someone asked which one was Miss Whitney's "beau."

"A BUNCH OF THE BOYS WERE WHOOPING IT UP"

DALZELL LEFT $406,000 ESTATE

Former Congressman John Dalzell, of Pittsburgh, who died recently in California, had his fortune of $409,000 invested in varied stocks and bonds, it is shown by the inventory of his personal estate filed in the Register of Wills' office. The inventory values the personal estate at $406,011.41. Of this, $50,262.89 is in bonds, including $12,000 of the Rochester Ice and Cold Storage Company, $9,000 of the bonds of the Philadelphia Rapid Transit Company and $6,000 of the bonds of the Niagara Falls Power Company. Mr. Dalzell also owned $46,900 worth of the capital stock of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company; $18,232 of American Telephone and Telegraph Company stock; $45,000 of the stock of the Braddock National Bank, of Braddock; $26,880 of the stock of the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Company. Other stock holdings included Bessemer Trust Company, Braddock, $15,000; North American Company, $14,000; Timken Roller Bearing Company, $14,000; Crucible Steel Company, $11,000; Bangor and Aroostook Railroad Company, $11,175, and Firestone Tire and Rubber Company, $10,000.

PETS THIEVES' DOWNFALL

Two pet pekinese dogs owned by Mrs. William Arnold, 31, of Washington, D. C., and Mrs. Belle Blankenship, 21, of Houston, Tex., were responsible for the arrest of the two women and William Arnold, 28, and Edward Clifford, 22, of Long Beach, Cal., yesterday as hotel robbers.

The four are said to have registered as man and wife at the Monogahela House a few days ago, and to have left there with hotel property. The description given to police told of the two pet dogs. Yesterday Detectives Edward Barry and Thomass Gross noticed two "Peks," followed the owners, and arrested the four in the Seventh Avenue Hotel. They are being held on suspicious person charges.

SENATE STARTS PROBES OF MEXICAN BRIBERY

DAVID A. REED

Senator Reed, Pennsylvania, was appointed chairman of a senatorial committee to investigate documents submitted by Hearst newspapers which declare Mexico paid three U. S. Senators $1,200,000.

HIRAM JOHNSON

Senator Johnson, the fiery Californian often mentioned in the past as presidential timber, will be on the Reed committee, which is to start its investigation of the Mexican plot at once.

American Shot in China

SHANGHAI, Dec. 10.—(AP.)—Frederick R. Stuart, an American who has lived in the Far East for a quarter of a century, was found shot to death today.

WESLEY L. JONES

The senator from Washington is the third member of the committee. Documents held by the Hearst papers show that the Calles government aided and financed anti-American revolutionists during the recent Nicaraguan trouble and disseminated propaganda favoring the revolutionists.

CHARGE INVALID VOTES CAST IN SPRINGDALE

Unqualified voters were permitted to vote at the November election in the First and Second districts of Springdale, a number of them voting on tax receipts given them within 10 days before the election and others with forged or altered tax receipts, were some of the charges contained in a petition filed in Quarter Sessions Court yesterday. The petition contests the election of five township commissioners, a constable and an auditor. Hearing was fixed for December 23.

E. E. Kennedy and A. E. Johnston each received 28 votes as candidate for township commissioner of the Eeventh district, Mifflin township, and they are unable to agree on any method to decide the winner. A petition was filed in court yesterday by 20 voters, seeking the appointment of Kennedy, and a hearing will take place December 23.

The election of Howard W. Ivill as justice of the peace of Forward township and the election of H. H. Swetnerbottom as constable of Upper St. Clair borough, were disputed in petitions filed. A hearing on the cases will be held December 23. A recount is asked in the vote for director in Sewickley Heights township.

Voters of the Fourteenth district of the Tenth Ward presented a petition asking that the district be divided into three districts. The petition states that there is a voting population of 1,400 and that delay has resulted at elections, with a considerable number of voters in line when the polls closed.

No evidence of improper alterations were found on the ballots of the Twenty-first district of the Twenty-first Ward by the special committee making a recount of impounded ballot boxes, but several mistakes were found in the tallies.

The district board gave Armstrong and Babcock 14 more votes than each received and McGovern and Shields seven votes less than each received. Walter L. Henderson, a candidate for poor director, which office is not voted on by the electors in the city, was given 55 votes.

WILLIAM C. BRUCE

Bruce, of Maryland is the one of the two Democratic investigators.

FLIES, FINDS WEDDING'S DEFERRED

By PATRICIA DOUGHERTY, Universal Service Staff Correspondent.

CHICAGO, Dec. 10.—After battling a storm at sea, a record snowfall in the Northwest, and taking an airplane for the last lap of his journey from Pekin, China, to Chicago in order to reach here yesterday for his wedding to Mrs. Emile Borie Ryerson, Forsythe Sherfesee, arrived last night only to learn that the wedding had been postponed until today.

Mr. Sherfesee, who is financial advisor to the Chinese government at Pekin, had never been up in an airplane, but when he learned that the train on which he was traveling from Vancouver to Chicago was several hours late and could not bring him here in time for the ceremony scheduled for noon, he chartered a plane to bring him from St. Paul, Minn., to Chicago.

Mrs. Ryerson is the widow of Arthur Ryerson, millionaire steel man, who was drowned in the Titanic disaster after placing his wife and son in a lifeboat and telling them he would take the next one and follow them. Instead, he went to their stateroom after the last lifeboat had been lowered, and was drowned.

DAVIS CALLS PARLEY

vitation of James J. Davis, secretary of labor, to attend a meeting of miners and producers in Washington for the purpose of bringing about peace in the bituminous regions where strikes have prevailed for many months.

It was apparent after the confabs that two of the largest producing concerns would not send representatives to the Washington parley, and the smaller producers seemed inclined to follow the leadership of the larger companies.

Carl E. Lesher, executive vice president of the Pittsburgh Coal Company, said "there is no point in this company meeting with officials of the government and the United Mine Workers to discuss labor troubles." A reply will be sent to the invitation, Lesher said.

Horace P. Baker, president of the Pittsburgh Terminal Coal Corporation, said he would reply to the invitation later in the day and did not care to say in advance just what the attitude of his company would be.

Philip Murray, international vice president of the Mine Workers, and P. T. Fagan, president of District No. 5, and other mine leaders will represent the miners of this district at the conference.

COLD KILLS FIVE IN NORTHWEST

SEATTLE, Wash., Dec. 10.—(AP.)—Five deaths were reported from the storm which struck the Pacific Northwest and Western Canada yesterday, blanketing the region with a coat of snow. Even colder weather was predicted for today.

Four men lost their lives when their skiff, in which they carried 1,500 pounds of clams, was wrecked in the San Juan Islands by the storm. They were taking the clams from shore to their gas boat when the skiff foundered. Parts of the boat were found along the beach this morning. The bodies were not recovered.

Mrs. A. Thornalley, 58, was found lying in the snow badly frozen near her home in Nelson, B. C. She died yesterday.

SLAYS WIFE AT HER BIDDING

EUREKA, Kas., Dec. 10.—(AP.)—Ivan M. Hart, confessed slayer of his bride of three weeks, today was found guilty of second degree murder by a jury in District Court here.

The case was given to the jury at 9 o'clock last night after defense attorneys pleaded "communicative insanity" caused the 21-year-old bank employe to slash his bride's throat when she demanded he kill her because she feared motherhood. The verdict was returned shortly after 2 o'clock this morning.

After several days of testimony, including that of scores of Hart's business associates who appeared as character witnesses, he testified he was unable to resist his wife's plea for death and that after slaying her he attempted to end his own life.

Hart told the jury that when he married Mabel Marmont last June she made him promise to kill her should she ever become an expectant mother. He said that on the evening of July 5, he met her at the railroad station where she was employed as a telegraph operator and that they started for an automobile ride.

He declared that she threatened "to commit suicide in the most disgraceful way possible," if he failed to take her life that night. Hart insisted that he protested lack of a weapon, but that she obtained an old knife from the automobile tool kit and urged him to use it.

"She pressed the knife into my hand and pointing to her throat said, 'cut right here,'" Hart testified.

"I felt dazed, as if my mind was leaving me. I slashed my own throat and wrists, and got back in the car to await death," he continued.

"PSYCHIC" AIDE SOUGHT

ERIE, Pa., Dec. 10.—Erie police are hunting J. W. Baer, said to have been an aide to "Professor" J. B. Mann, "psychologist," after Edward Malonski said Baer and the "Professor" swindled him out of $700.

"Professor" Mann is sought as the perpetrator of a confidence game as a result of which Mrs. J. L. Pittenger lost $1,250, her life's savings, and J. M. Pettit, 64, of Cambridge Springs, Pa., was fleeced out of $1,500. Indications are that Mann has left a string of victims in his wake.

"You Said It, Marceline!"

By HAVEY BOYLE

AN interview in Pittsburgh with Marceline d'ALROY, whose scintillating comment on men and women appears exclusively in the Sun-Telegraph.

When a MARRIED man is ASSIGNED to interview a
WIDOW, who BESIDES being Charming, is an EXPERT—on LOVE, and ALSO an authority
On fashion, THE man DOES
NOT wonder
WHAT questions he will ASK the LADY, but wonders what
ANSWERS he
Will give the LITTLE WOMAN
Back home—
AS the BOYS say,
KNOWING nothing about fashion,
And LESS than that about

Those other THINGS which
MISS MARCELINE D'ALROY
EXPERTS about in her daily
COLUMN in the
SUN-TELEGRAPH,
I figured the ONLY REASON
I GOT the assignment
Was because I was BORN
With TWO STRIKES on me.
TO MAKE matters more
Intricate MARCELINE, as I
SOON called her while she FLICKED a thread off my Coat and PLAYFULLY adjusted
My NECKTIE, speaks with A FRENCH accent.

I felt more at EASE when, after Having TOLD this charming
Authority on LOVE, that my
Two little daughters had a VERY Bad cold, and that, in FACT
Dorothy had missed SCHOOL
Yesterday, Marceline LAUGHED
Knowingly and SAID:
"I am a WIDOW and I never Intend to marry AGAIN."
"That's FINE," I said,
Shaking her HAND in
Congratulation on SUCH a DECISION.
Accustomed to ASKING
Babe Ruth WHY he hits
Home runs or asking TUNNEY
How he defeated DEMPSEY,
I FOUND myself asking
MARCELINE: "Do you THINK
DEMPSEY will EVER fight
AGAIN?"
THEN I remmembered and got Down to BUSINESS.
"Have you any SPECIFIC to Make HUSBANDS cheerful at
The BREAKFAST table?"
"Why should THEY be cheerful
If they don't WANT to be?"
Asked MARCELINE.
I kind of LIKED that.
"I believe HUSBANDS should
Be left SEVERELY alone at BREAKFAST TIME."
"What is your IDEAL
With relation to MEN?"
I added: "assuming, OF COURSE,
You had never met ME."
"I like an OUTDOOR MAN With INDOOR MANNERS."
She laughed a LITTLE.
And I held onto my CHAIR.
"And the IDEAL WOMAN?"
"One," Marceline replied, "WITH TACT."

"AMERICAN MEN are good
Providers, but POOR husbands.
They are not SUBTLE.
They SELDOM do the UNEXPECTED.
It is ROUTINE with them—
This MARRIAGE."
"AMERICAN WOMEN," she Volunteered, "dress BETTER Than women of ANY Other COUNTRY."
"To BAIT men or BAIT women?" I asked
With as much CYNICISM
As I HAD with me at the time.
"BOTH," smiled Marceline,
"MAINLY, to bait men,
HOWEVER."
"Does woman do the PURSUING
As Mr. Shaw BELIEVES?"
"Yes, but SOMETIMES, by APPEARING to run away."
"How about the FLAPPER?"
"A little RECKLESS—
Like a man of the NOVEAU
RICHE type.
She is spending TOO
MUCH for what she gets
In RETURN.
SOON she will LEARN.
The PRESENT is a phase—
And NOT a destination."
"Do you THINK you would
LIKE this country if prohibition
Ever CAME?" I asked.
"It is a GOOD country,
REGARDLESS of prohibition
Or NO prohibition."
I wondered HOW I could
Think up SOMETHING to say
About FASHION
Which would SHOW
I was up on the LATEST
STUFF.
I struck upon IT at last.
"Will the SHORT skirt
EVOLUTE into
A LONGER one?"
"NEVER," said Marceline.
"The SHORT skirt has come
To STAY—
Like BOBBED HAIR."
"But a COUSIN of mine
Who LOOKS now and then
At the FLAPPERS
TOLD me that the young girls
Were ALLOWING their hair
To grow LONG," I argued.
"SOME, yes," said Marceline,
"But THEY for the time
Are seeking SOMETHING
Different from the STYLE.
LATER they will come Back to the BOB."
"Your COUSIN told you that,"
Laughed Marceline. "HA, HA,
You GREAT big boy."
And I RAN all the way
Back to the OFFICE.

Censorship Gone, Will at Loss For News

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 10.—They just last night removed the censorship on news from Mexico, and now I don't know anything to say. From now on you will get the truth; and, I'll bet you, the truth is not as bad as the rumors.

I am having dinner tonight with General Obregon, the sole surviving candidate of all parties. Just think, if you had to eat with every presidential candidate of both parties at home you would be eating out the rest of your life.

Pennington yesterday filed in the Federal District Court a forfeiture libel against approximately 200 quarts of choice wines, vermouth, gin and other liquors seized November 11 by prohibition agents in a raid at the plant of the Iron City Brewing Company, 3340 Liberty avenue. The court directed an order be issued against officers of the company to show cause why the property seized should not be condemned as forfeited to the government.

COUNTY PARK -:- GETS FIRST -:- OF BISON HERD

WATCH AGAINST STAMPEDE

Armed guards stood ready to bring down unruly bison as 18 of the "monarchs of the Plains" were placed in the county's North Park yesterday. Another herd will be placed in South Park soon.

LOOSED IN 100-ACRE PLAYGROUND

Trucks with the crated animals were backed up to the barn opening. The animals were prodded out of the crates and sent scurrying through the barn to the 100-acre preserves. One of the younger members of the herd, refused to pass through the opening. He saw some hay and stopped. An hour was required to get him through, and then only after he had sampled the hay.

"H'YA, OSCAR!"

Home was never like this. Oscar, the "baby" of the herd, looks things over as he shakes the kinks out of his legs. Three days two nights in a crate failed to dampen his enthusiasm and he frolicked about quite unconcerned about his change of pasture.

Mellon a Chef? Well, Book Says So

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS,
Sun-Telegraph Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—Secretary of the Treasury Andrew W. Mellon, of Pittsburgh, today appeared in the new role of chef extraordinary—as an authority on the preparation of "curried chicken."

Whether the Treasury Department head has ever gotten away from financial affairs long enough to "curry" a chicken remains doubtful in official government circles, but he is at least credited with a recipe on the delicacy in a cook book gotten out here by the Congressional Club, made up of wives and daughters of members of Congress.

Other contributors to the book include the wives of Vice President Dawes, of ex-presidents, and of members of the Senate.

Secretary Mellon's recipe, described as a "piece de resistance," is as follows:

"Singe, draw and wash a 4-pound chicken. Cut it into 8 pieces, then place the pieces, flesh side down, in a saucepan. Pour over 2 ounces of hot butter. Fry nicely on both sides, then sprinkle and add 2 ounces of chopped onion. Continue to fry without browning the onions. Sprinkle with 2 ounces of flour, then fry 2 minutes longer; add 1¼ pints of stock of water. Boil, and add 1 apple, pared and cut into dices and fried nice brown, with 1 ounce of butter. Add 1 heaping teaspoonful curry powder, a little salt, 1 small clove of garlic, crushed, and 1 heaping tablespoonful of Major Grey's Indian chutney, chopped fine. Cover the pan and cook slowly about 45 minutes. Serve in border of rice—hot, well drained—having been cooked in plenty of water for 20 minutes."

Hunt Boy, Father Held

HARRISBURG, Dec. 10.—While nearly the entire population of Newville, Cumberland county village, was searching for Vernon Bitner, Jr., 18 months, the father today was sitting in a cell at the Harrisburg police station.

Bitner was arrested on Thursday on suspicion in the disappearance of his son. He denies all knowledge of the case.

Neighbors of Bitner have offered the theory that the child had not been kidnaped, as the father claims, but that his abduction was part of a plot in which Bitner had knowledge.

Police believe Bitner planned to desert his wife after first having obtained a home among relatives for his child.

According to Bitner's story, the boy was seated on a chair in the kitchen of the home early Thursday morning. Bitner walked out of the house and when he returned a few minutes later the child was gone.

Hearing the sound of an automobile starting in front of the house, he says, he jumped in his own machine and raced down the road for about four miles.

The borough council is planning a special meeting and probably will offer a reward for the discovery of the child.

MACHINES CAN'T STOP VOTE REPEATERS

Continuing his discussion of voting machines, Ralph S. Boots, professor of political science in the University of Pittsburgh and a director of the Pennsylvania Elections Association, who has indicated the advantages and disadvantages of these devices in previous articles in The Sun-Telegraph, said today it was only fair to admit that while they would prevent many forms of fraud now prevalent at the polls they would not stop fraudulent registration.

Citizens of Pennsylvania will vote at the next general election on a constitutional amendment authorizing the use of voting machines. Prof. Boots favors the measure, but he thinks the voters should not be led to expect that voting machines will cure all election evils.

"It is only fair to say," he stated, "that voting machines will not prevent fraudulent registration, nor will they prevent repeating, nor will they prevent members of an election board, acting in collusion, from 'ringing up' votes for which there are no legitimate voters. But one trusty watcher at a polling place during the voting time alone will prevent repeating within a single district, impersonation, probably, and the voting of unregistered persons.

"One of the most needed changes in the Pennsylvania election law, if not the most needed, is one which will make it easy for any voter in a county to get permission from a court to act as a watcher in any district in the county. At present watchers, and even overseers, must be voters of the precinct in which they serve. The law seems to assume that each voting district has the greatest, if not an exclusive, interest and concern in the honesty of the election in that district. This is a grievous mistake.

"The law should recognize the fact that to an honest voter anywhere in the state it is of vital importance that every vote cast be an honest vote, no matter how distant. Otherwise, his vote in Pittsburgh may be cancelled by fraud in Scranton, or his vote in Erie may be nullified by fraud in Philadelphia. The state must protect the suffrage everywhere, else the right to vote, which is the fundamental political right in a democracy, becomes a farce."

Reverting to voting machines, Prof. Boots remarked that their principal virtue was their accuracy. No matter how honest they may be, election officials, tired by counting, are likely to make mistakes. With voting machines, he said, honest, but careless, or perhaps unskillful, judges, inspectors and clerks do not allow glaring inaccuracies to creep in. No opportunity is afforded dishonest election boards, when voting machines are used, to erase marks on some ballots and add marks on others, to throw ballots away, or introduce additional ones. "For," said Prof. Boots in conclusion, "there are no ballots in a voting machine."

GAVE HER RING; GOT SCRATCHES

David C. Longwell, Homewood druggist, bought his wife, Edna M. Longwell, a diamond ring costing $375, just to keep peace in the family, he testified when Judge George V. Moore took up his side of the divorce action being heard in Common Pleas Court.

Longwell claims that his wife was hysterical; that on one occasion he was forced to throw a glass of water in her face to revive her; that she scratched him during temperamental fits of anger and locked him out of the house, forcing him to sleep in his garage, or a hotel.

Mrs. Longwell is suing her husband for divorce from bed and board only, while Longwell wants an absolute divorce. Judge Moore adjourned the case until January 3.

DAVID J. DAVIES CLEARED

David J. Davies, once office assistant to former Prohibition Administrator F. C. Baird, was cleared yesterday of embezzling government records in an investigation of the Schenley Products Company. The jury received binding instructions from Judge R. M. Gibson for a verdict of not guilty. The court holding there was no proof that the records Davies was alleged to have offered for sale actually were government records.

The trial came to an abrupt close when Assistant Federal Prosecutor Ralph H. Smith offered in evidence the papers involved. The court sustained the objection of Attorney D. P. MacQuarrie, who, with Attorney Warren H. Van Kirk, both former government attorneys, were counsel for Davies, against strong opposition by Attorney Smith.

WORLD TOUR MOVIES PLEASE COLLEGE CLUB

A goodly turnout of College Club members saw the unusual motion picture which had been taken by Miss Agate Brown on her trip around the world and which was exhibited for their enjoyment yesterday afternoon at the club house. Miss Brown, although entirely inexperienced as a motion picture photographer, managed to catch some views and photographs that are most interesting. She, with a party of eight others, made the trip via the Southern Hemisphere, leaving New York and going to Honolulu, Panama, the Fiji Islands, Java, Ceylon, New Guinea, Buenos Aires, Zanzibar, Martinique and many other places not usually visited by tourists. In all of the stepping pieces the motion picture camera was kept busy and the result was thrown on the screen yesterday. Some of the pictures are of great beauty, especially those of Victoria Nyanza Falls and of the Rhodes Memorial. Others, showing native dances and ceremonials are both interesting and amusing. The usual tea followed the film showing.

College Films Prove Popular So Richard Dix Decides to Make One With Oxford for Setting

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS,
Motion Picture Editor of Universal Service

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 10.

THERE isn't the slightest doubt, when we sit down quietly to analyze the past year's performances, college stories will rank high in the list of popular screen entertainment. Richard Dix is a wise boy. He is planning to get in on the popular wave of this class of story.

His next, "Oxford," is by John Monk Saunders, the lad who wrote "Wings," "The Legion of the Condemned" and "James Saxon Childers." Curiously enough "Oxford" is the story of a Rhodes scholar at Oxford. Mr. Saunders should be able to write rather convincingly on this subject since he, himself, went to Oxford and was, himself, a Rhodes scholar. This tale, I believe, is a little different, isn't it, from the usual garden variety of stories?

As for the leading lady—patience, my children, patience—the story was just decided upon yesterday and these things all take time.

Will Rogers, who nearly drove Sam Bork to desperation when he persisted in riding in airplanes before "The Texas Steer' was completed, is to have another fling at the movies. In March, the ex-mayor of Beverly Hills will again repeat his appearance before the camera. This time there is no telling what adventure he may choose, but Mr. Rork and his associates feel there could be nothing worse than these air escapades that so intrigued our Will these last few months. Mr. Rork, by the by, will supervise Billie Doves' next picture, "The Heart of a Follie Girl." This assignment was handed to him while the big chiefs of First National were here in conference.

The sirenic voice of the movies continues. Jack Luden is a perfect example of what it does to a young man's business career. As the heir of the Cough Drop King, young Luden only expected to come into the movies as a side issue, determining to return to Pennsylvania and business at a later date. He made several pictures and when Paramount offered him a contract, he refused it on the ground that he had a splendid chance to go into the steel business in Philadelphia. He and his family rented their house out here, disposed of their furniture and were ready to leave Hollywood cold. The story goes that young Luden even had his bags packed. "I can't do it. I've got to stay," he said. With that he walked over to Paramount and asked them if they still wanted him. They did—and without turning a hair he sat down and signed a five-year contract. Meanwhile, the steel business waits for him—in vain.

If a little quiet dickering between Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and Universal materializes we shall see Marian Nixon on the M. G. M. lot playing an important role in "China Bound," the next Navarro drama. Funny thing about these companies. A year or so ago there was almost no exchange of players, now the studios are so polite to each other they bend backwards to do a favor.

Miss Nixon has a little job to do for Universal before she is free to leave the home ground. She has a part in "Fallen Angels," but it will probably not keep her from appearing in Navarro's picture. William Nye, the director; Ramon Navarro, the star, and two or three executives want her for the part, so it's a dollar against my last year's shoes the petite Marian spends Christmas week at Culver City.

Marian was formerly married to Joe Benjamin and occupied several front page stories when he decided he didn't want her to leave him.

You can't blame him if he didn't, she is certainly a pretty girl.

Ready For Him

JOAN CRAWFORD, like the woman who gets out her rich uncle's picture when he is expected for a visit, must have heard Santa Claus is coming to her house. Anyway she has found a characteristic picture of jolly St. Nicholas and she is all ready for him. Joan is in "The Understanding Heart," coming to Loew's Aldine.

Serious Moment

MOLLY O'DAY and Sally O'Neil, as they appear in a scene in a film version of the Beatrice Fairfax tale, "The Love-lorn," now appearing in the Sun-Telegraph and other Hearst papers. The girls play sisters in this picture, which will be on the screen soon.

"Wooden Kimona," Mystery Play, Coming

"Wooden Kimona," a mystery play by John Floyd, will be shown in the Nixon next week. It comes after a New York engagement, with what is announced as the original cast and production. Besides the element of mystery, there is comedy sprinkled throughout the action.

Gene Buck's musical comedy, "Yours Truly," opens Monday night in the Alvin, with Leon Errol as the leading comic, who will be aided by Gertrude Lang, Douglas Stevenson, Tom Waters, Vera Myers, Theodore Babcock, Forrest Yarnall, Vic Casmore, David Herblin, Elizabeth Duray, John Kearney, Jimmie McCallion, Jack Stanley, Van Horn and Inez and others.

Conlin and Glass appear on the Keith-Albee vaudeville program in the Davis next week, presenting dishes entitled "Morning, Noon and Night." Janet Gaynor will be starred on the screen in "Two Girls Wanted."

JABBED, EYE BLACKENED, HE DEMANDS DIVORCE

NEW PHILADELPHIA, O., Dec. 10.—George W. Keith, Uhrichsville, in his suit for divorce filed yesterday, avers that his wife, Arra Keith, jabbed his leg with a fork one day and blackened his eye the next day.

Weed, Underworld Gangster, Sentenced to Death Chair

THE JURY brought in the death verdict this afternoon in the case of "Bull" Weed, notorious underworld leader and killer. Weed is pictured above as caught by the cameraman just before he was taken to the courtroom to receive his sentence.

"Bull" Weed has at last been brought to justice. The jury, this afternoon, returned a verdict of murder in the first degree and Weed has been sentenced to the death chair. The final chapter of a seething underworld melodrama is about to be enacted.

Time and again Weed has committed crimes, but never have the authorities been able to pin the guilt on him. Notorious and fearless, he has laughed in their faces. But at last justice has conquered, and he is sentenced to die. The underworld, however, has not lost faith in his prowess, and still thinks that by hook or crook "Bull" Weed will escape his penalty. The authorities are just as determined that this time there will be no loophole for his escape.

Weed might have killed almost any one else and got away with it, but to kill Buck Mulligan, rival gang leader, meant the bringing down of the wrath of all Mulligan's gang upon his head—and it was their shouts for vengeance that resulted in his capture.

Neither "Feathers," Weed's moll, nor "Rolls-Royce," his pal, has been able to see him since he was taken into custody. The authorities are taking no chances on the possibility of plans thus secretly being made for his escape. It seems that Weed is doomed to solitary confinement until his death.

Will the chair claim "Bull" Weed or will he make his escape? For further information, see Paramount's super-film, "Underworld." This matchless melodrama begins a week's engagement Monday, December 12, at the Grand and Liberty Theaters. There will be a special midnight show at the Grand Sunday, December 11, beginning at 12:05 a. m.

PATRICIA PITT'S SOCIAL COMMENT

Attics Are Ransacked for Old Time Ball Costumes

ATTICS are being ransacked and old trunks emptied these days in search of dresses with leg o' mutton sleeves and long, sweeping skirts—relics of the "gay nineties," which are to be worn at the Federation of Girls' School Societies ball December 27 in the William Penn Hotel by—shall we say the daughters or the granddaughters of the "mauve decade"? At any rate, the debutantes and girls who have been out for one or two seasons will sweep across the ballroom in these old "rigs," tilting wide, floppy hats on their unaccustomed heads.

There are to be several tableaux, all of them amusing, and the specialty dances will include that old friend, the Florodora Sextet, done by debutantes wearing costumes loaned from New York; the College Widow dance, and, to jump from one century into another, an ultra-ultra modern 1990 dance.

The Midway Plaisance, which will be arranged in the red room, is to be a miniature World's Fair, and there are to be many of the amusements that attract crowds to the parks in summer.

Mrs. Ambrose Nevin Diehl, who is chairman for all these features, has been working hard for the past few weeks to work out the many details satisfactorily. She is being assisted by Marjorie Kimball, who is in charge of the dances, with Alice Childs and Martha Brooks as vice chairmen, and Mrs. Wilmer M. Jacoby, who is arranging the tableaux.

News is filtering up north from Palm Beach regarding plans for the season which is soon to begin and changes that have been made in living quarters. As was related here before, Mrs. Henry R. Rea recently spent a week at her beautiful new winter home on South Ocean boulevard, which she purchased last spring from the John Magees of Mt. Kisco, N. Y. She is to return there with her daughter, Anne, after Christmas, for the remainder of the season.

Mr. and Mrs. de Grimm Renfro of Uniontown have leased their winter home to the Milton W. Holdens of New York. Mrs. Holden, you recall, was Fifi Widener, and was in Palm Beach last season as a bride. Mr. Renfro's mother, Mrs. Thomas J. Blair of Fifth avenue, with Mr. Blair and Sarah Nolene Blair, are arriving in Palm Beach this week to spend the holidays at their attractive winter home on Sunset avenue. Mrs. Blair spent but a short time there last season, joining her sister at Seabreeze, Fla., for the greater part of the winter.

Of course, the Rev. Dr. Maitland Alexander and Mrs. Alexander are arranging to join the Palm Beach colony again this year, occupying their large white house on North Ocean boulevard. And Mr. and Mrs. James Francis Burke are arranging to spend the entire season at The Breakers.

Boys from the Choate School are planning to come home for the Christmas holidays about December 22—none too early to enjoy all the parties that are being arranged for the young people of the school set. Among the Choate boys who will arrive here on that date are James H. Lockhart, Jr., George Singer Ebbert, Jr., J. Merrill Wright, J. H. Childs, Jr., Jack Kennedy, Worthington Johnson, Tremaine Billings, A. Scott McQueen and William B. Trainer, Jr.

You recall, of course, that Worthington Johnson's mother, Mrs. William Terrell Johnson, is to give a dance for him the day after he gets home. Mrs. Johnson's ball for her debutante daughter, Mary Louise, is scheduled for December 22, you know.

Mrs. William Thaw, Jr., and Mrs. William D. Hamilton, who have been spending several days at the Berkshire in New York, have returned home.

Boys of the Princeton Triangle Club who will give their annual performance in Syria Mosque December 23 will be entertained after the entertainment at a ball to be given in the University Club by Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Gwinner III, of Kinsman road, and their sister, Sara Louise Gwinner, daughter of the Edward William Gwinners, of Fifth and Amberson avenues. Frederick Gwinner is a Princeton man, having been graduated in 1923, and his brother, Edward William Gwinner, Jr., is a senior there now.

This date, as you know, was the one which had been taken by the late Fred R. Babcock for a ball in honor of his debutante daughter, Marjorie.

Among the girls expected home shortly from school for the holidays are Virginia Frew Wright, daughter of the Thruston Wrights, of Shady avenue, and Frances Reed, daughter of the junior James Hay Reeds, of Castleman street. Both girls are students at the Masters School, Dobbs Ferry.

Last night in the Pittsburgh Club the first of the two Friday night dinner dances given instead of the traditional Benedict dances, was held, with about 180 present. The guests were seated at small tables placed around a dancing space in the ballroom. The men in charge of the dance were William C. Robinson, William P. Snyder, Jr., and McCleane Brown.

* * *

Mrs. James Mills Dalbey, of Roslyn place, and Mrs. Dickson Kearns Coyle, of Wallingford street, are planning to give a dinner-dance December 29 in the Country Club of Allegheny county in honor of their daughters, Elizabeth Mills Dalbey, an Ellis School student, and Wilhelmina Elizabeth Coyle, who is a Westover School girl.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. John S. Sheekey, of West street, Wilkinsburg, have announced the marriage of their daughter, Miss Eleanor Margaret Sheekey, and Dr. Noble H. Dick, of Sumner, S. C., which was solemnized November 22 in Portland, Ore. Dr. and Mrs. Dick will live in Seattle.

Announcement has been made of the marriage of Miss Helen Marie Frazier, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chauncey E. Frazier, of Washington, Pa., and Edwin Wellington Campbell, son of the late Dr. and Mrs. Edwin E. Campbell, of Syracuse and Alexandria Bay, which was solemnized Thursday in the First Presbyterian Church, Sixth avenue, by the Rev. Dr. Charles E. Macartney. Mr. and Mrs. Campbell sailed today for Bermuda and the West Indies, and after January 1 will be at home in Washington.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. William Oliver Bellinger, of South Aiken avenue, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Dorothy Grace Bellinger, to Charles Harrison Harney, of Lexington, Ky., and New York, son of Mrs. Frank Semple, Jr., of Shields. Mr. Harney is a grandson of the late Gen. John Bell Hood, of Louisiana and Kentucky.

Announcement has been made of the engagement of Miss Frances Antoinette Fitzsimmons, daughter of George W. Fitzsimmons, of Baum boulevard, to Paul C. Gannon, son of Mr. and Mrs. James J. Gannon, of South Atlantic avenue. An early February wedding is planned. Mr. Gannon is a graduate of the Carnegie Institute of Technology and a member of the Delta Tau Delta and Theta Tau fraternities.

Announcement is made of the marriage of Mrs. Mary M. Montgomery, daughter of Archibald Mackrell, of the Butler pike, and Charles Edgar Hill, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hill, of the North Side, which was solemnized yesterday by the Rev. C. M. Miller. Mr. and Mrs. Hill will be at home after January 1 in Beeler street.

Miss Elizabeth Ross Thomas, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Vernon D. Thomas, of North St. Clair street, will return next week from Wellesley College, where she is a senior. She will bring with her a classmate, Miss Marion Poque Milnor, of Cincinnati, for a few days' visit. Miss Thomas will give a bridge luncheon in the Garden Tearoom, December 13, for Miss Milnor.

A Christmas play, "The Star in the East," by Anna Jane Harnwell, will be presented by Holy Rosary High School Juniors Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday night in the school auditorium. Miss Madeleine Skelly is directing the cast.

This New Freedom Made Plain

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

HERE is a letter from a girl who is indignant because she feels that "the morals of the nation" are allowed to rest on the shoulders of its women.

Her letter is sincere, straight from the shoulder, so I am glad to give it space in my column, even though I may disagree with some of its conclusions.

"Dear Miss Fairfax:

"Why so much worry about the trend of morals of the modern girl? Aren't clean, moral men just as important as women to the health and success of the future generation and the life-long happiness of marriage? Why should the morals of the nation be allowed to rest on the shoulders of the 'weaker sex'? Why can't men share some of the responsibility and use some of the will power they are supposed to have, instead of saying, 'It all depends on you!'

"Of how much value is the love and undying trust of a man, which you emphasize so much in your articles, who has to be held up and inspired the rest of his life?

"There is no logical reason why a woman should be responsible for the morals of both herself and her masculine companion and get blamed for all the petting, while he is allowed to go as far as she permits without being censored.

"For generations men smoked, drank and indulged in other forms of dissipation, yet no one was especially concerned. But now that women have decided to enjoy some of the privileges heretofore enjoyed only by the masculine sex, the world is in an uproar and wonders what is to become of the future child, as if heredity were miraculously one-sided, there being no possibility of the father's transmitting any influence.

"But, owing to the fact that even now moral women greatly outnumber moral men, it seems to me that most of the preaching should be directed at the masculine sex until the scales balance. For, in order to reach an ideal stage of living, there must be no difference in the privileges enjoyed by the two sexes.

"SINGLE STANDARD."

There will always be differences, dear Miss Single Standard, between the privileges enjoyed by men and those enjoyed by women. Old Mother Nature has attended to that.

Men and women are differently constituted. It is probable that the average man will always enjoy more sheer physical strength than the average woman. The average woman has a more delicate nervous organism than the average man, and for that reason is more injuriously affected by stimulants. None is to blame for this state of affairs except Nature.

Motherhood entails loss of freedom, prolonged responsibility, self-sacrifice which are not included in fatherhood by Nature's plan. So you see, do you not, how utterly impossible it is that men and women should ever enjoy identically the same privileges? Both men and women function according to the nature of things, and in the material and spiritual structure of life have their own privileges, their own responsibilities, their own joys.

As for worrying about the trend of morals of modern girls, I don't know that so much worrying is being done by thoughtful persons. Girls are enjoying new freedom, and in some cases are a little intoxicated by it. But they will find poise and balance just as the pendulum swings back and forth, preserving balance.

This particular column of mine happens to be devoted to love problems of girls, which accounts for the fact that it devotes more space to talking things over with girls than it does to "preaching directed at the masculine sex," which you suggest.

It is true that we need "clean, moral men," as well as clean, moral women if we are to have healthy, successful men and women in future generations. But do not forget, dear Single Standard, that women have almost entire charge of children during the first dozen years of life, when the child is absolutely at the mercy of the moral and mental atmosphere surrounding it, so it is even more important for a child to have a good mother than a good father.

Women are the "weaker sex" only in physical strength. Because of the self-sacrifice demanded by motherhood, women have maintained men morally and spiritually, and men look to good women for spiritual inspiration.

No girl is responsible for the morals of her "masculine companion." But she is responsible for her own petting, drinking and smoking, her mode of dress and conduct.

It is true, for many generations many men drank too much and indulged freely in harmful dissipations. But indulgence in vice is not a privilege, it is a pitiable, destructive weakness. Why should any girl consider it a privilege to ape these vices?

It is right that woman should strive to free herself from unjust handicaps. But woman's greatest privilege is to find a good man, win and hold his love and respect, marry him, stay married and with him found a home and family. For men and women are not antagonists. They are complementary to each other and together, they can best realize the deep meaning of life—its responsibilities, peace, joy, self-sacrifice and success—through marriage of suitability and love.

OLD VAMPS FOR NEW

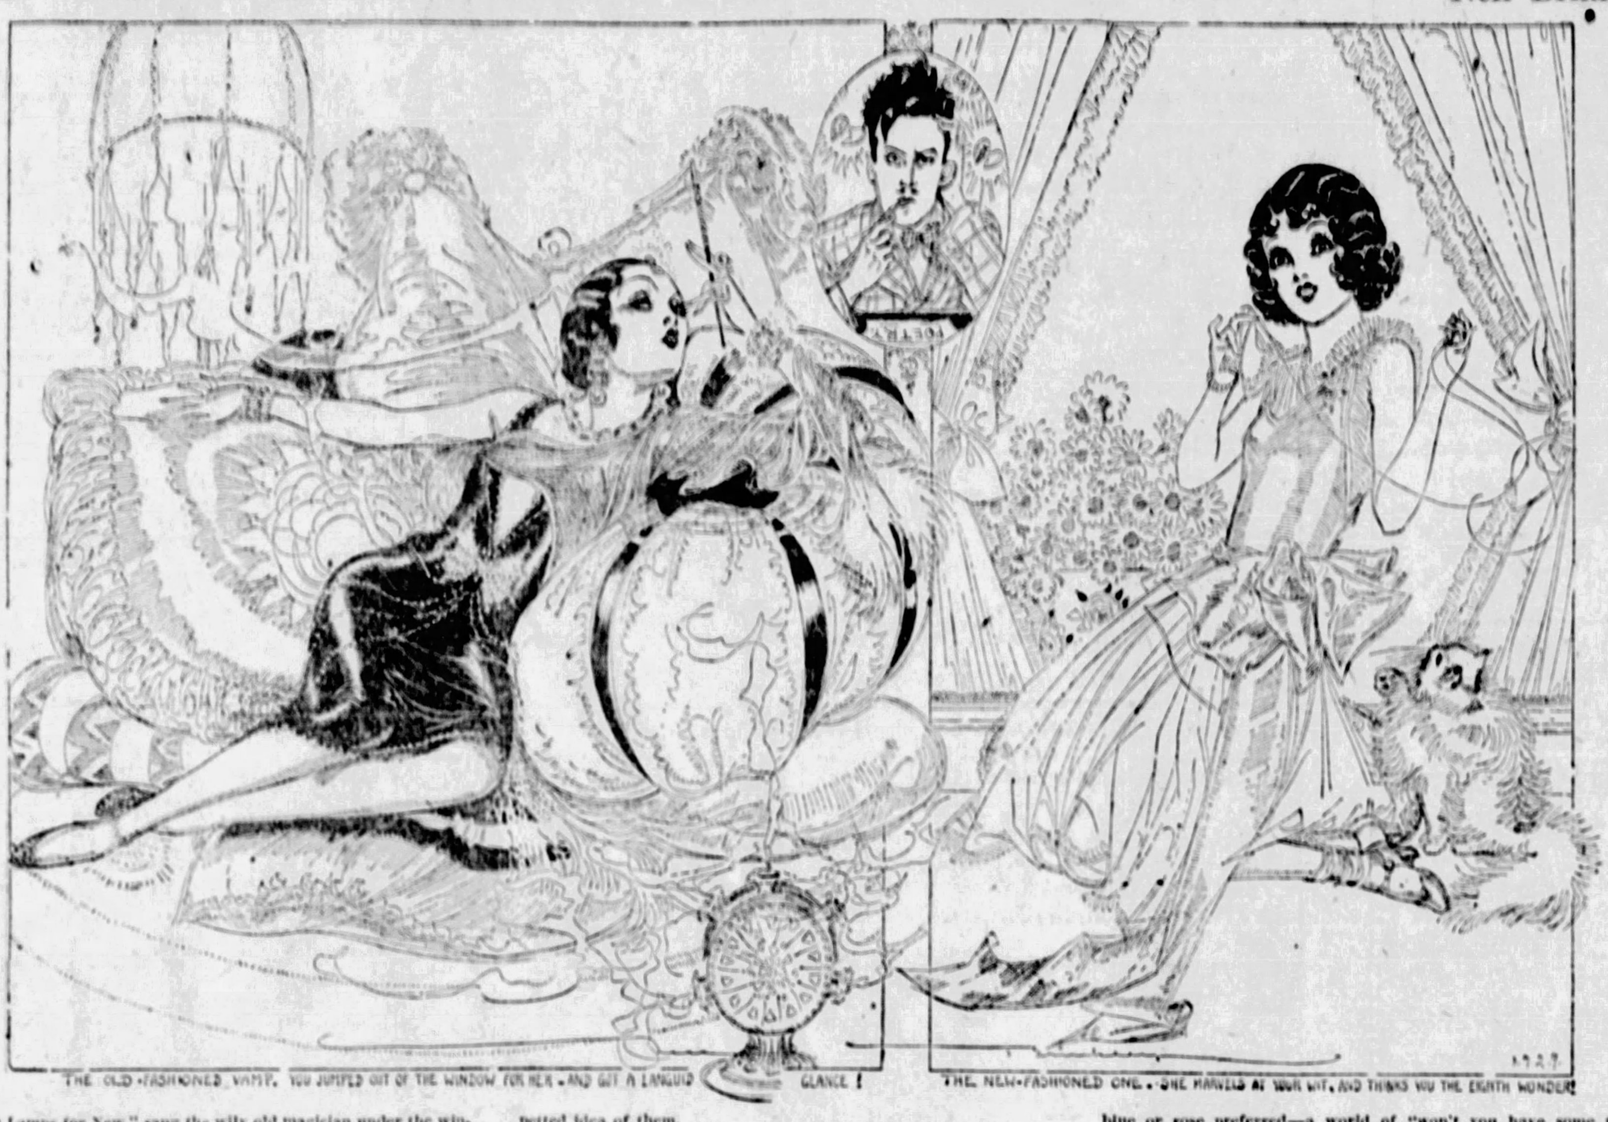
DRAWN BY Nell Brinkley



"OLD Lamps for New," sang the wily old magician under the windows of Badroulbadour, where she sat listening in new-wedded bliss to the bul-bul singing in the—was it a ginger-bread tree?—in the faery tale "Aladdin and the Wonderful Lamp."

"Old vamps for new," sings another wily wight, older even than the old wizerd, but ah how much fresher and pinker and more delectable and YOUNGER! Cupid, with the golden hair and silver voice, is telling the world that he is now handing out new sirens for old, not because the old are so much to be coveted and the new have no magic in them at all. But just the other way around!

The old style in vamps has gone out—or at least the world's petted idea of them.

Black velvet and glittering chains; languor and disdain; tiger walk and Nance O'Neil voice; hypnotic gaze and Hindu hair dress; incense and idleness; exotic color and fantastic settings; a singular world that just-a-man was supposed to be intoxicated by at the first step of his brogue across its threshold; and a singular woman whose one glance devastated his heart and spirited him away from his people and his old haunts forever. That was the old-fashioned Vamp! You jumped out of the window for her sake, and she gave you a languid glance.

But the curtain is snatched aside—and look at the new one! Daisies and wide eyes; socks and pretty sighs; pep and laughter; simplicity and sentiment; gayety and gullibility; winsomeness and willingness; sunshine and ruffled curtains; softness and sashes—blue or rose preferred—a world of "won't you have some tea? This is a silly thing that I'm making, but I love to sew; just put the cat on the floor; his name is Puffy, please; you think of a better name; I know it would be more original. I'm ga-ga about Ronald Colman; you look just lots like him—serious and mysterious and clever, no! Oh, how wonderful. I don't know anything about that at all; tell me MORE!" a pretty world of peach-colored ruffles wherein nowdays men do indeed vanish from the sight of their accustomed days and ways as if they had fallen through the pass into the "Hollowland;" a girl of curls and smiles and laughter and wondering baby stares. THAT is the new Vamp. She marvels at your wit and thinks you the eighth wonder! And devastates perhaps more sweepingly than ever the old one of snake-skin gowns and slow motion did.

—NELL BRINKLEY.

Simple Vamping

(Lesson Two.)

By HELEN ROWLAND

SUPPRESS YOURSELF!

SIMPLE Vamping is not taught in the schools and colleges—yet. But nearly every girl is taking it up as a side-line.

Not all of us, as I have said, can be born with real "IT;" but there is a sort of synthetic "IT" which is almost as convincing as the best quality of synthetic pearls.

* * *

The first requisite for synthetic "IT" is—You've guessed it!—Sweet INDIFFERENCE. A woman is always most interesting to a man when she is interested in something or somebody ELSE—and only mildly interested in himself.

HELEN ROWLAND

Sweet Indifference does not mean being cold, cynical and acrid. That is being a "prune." We can always be most polite, charming and amiable to people to whom we are indifferent. Why not to the people we love?

* * *

Leap Year is coming, and of course every girl will have the right to propose. She always has the "right" to propose. She also has the right to go fishing with a shotgun—but she won't catch anything.

* * *

Every woman is a love-seeker and every man is a love-dodger. But, most men are guileless creatures, who still optimistically believe that they will some day, somewhere find a woman who has to be chased and captured, pursued and conquered.

* * *

If you can manage to give a man the sweet illusion that he is pursuing you, you will at least get the first good break in the game.

* * *

All you have to do, is to tie your hands behind your back to keep from writing him letters, and to tear the telephone off the wall to keep from calling him up.

* * *

The hardest thing on earth for any woman to do is to be absolutely neutral in the love-game. She always feels, somehow, that she must DO something, SAY something, START something. Most girls would be more successful in love, if they could be roped, tied and gagged the moment they feel a little sentiment for any man bubbling up in them.

"IT" is based on unselfconsciousness; and no girl can be unselfconscious, who is secretly "emoting" over a man, and losing her beauty sleep, dreaming about him. Let George do the dreaming.

* * *

It is awfully hard, I know, to sit back and wait for the love-idea to penetrate the thick layers of resistance that cover the masculine mind. But "watchful waiting" is woman's winning card; and the first step in the conquest of man is SELF-conquest.

* * *

As long as a girl goes hunting with a horn, a loud-speaker, war paint and a drum, she is going to give men all the good breaks. And every man's first break will be—to break and run!

* * *

In love, as in dancing, always let the man do the "leading."

U.S. Senator from New York

Health Essential to Real Success

WHEN a student in college I occasionally played tennis on Saturday mornings with a young man who has come to be a great factor in the educational world. Now he is president of Yale. Following in the footsteps of his illustrious father, Dr. Angell is one of the greatest of the college presidents.

DR. COPELAND

At the annual matriculation service last fall, President Angell gave the entering class some wholesome suggestions. The doctor remarked whimsically that he would not undertake to advise the freshmen, because "advice unsought is rarely welcome and more rarely heeded."

What was said about health should be widely read and heeded far beyond the boundaries of the Yale campus. Let me quote from Dr. Angell:

"What are the talents most essential for an honorable, profitable and happy four years at Yale? I do not hesitate to put in the forefront physical health and vigor. The ascetic and emaciated saint is a historic figure, and there are doubtless forms of spiritual experience which accrue to a complete mortification of the flesh. But unless one is prepared to defend the morbid view that life itself is unworthy and gladly to be left behind, one must look to bodily health as a blessing to be devoutly sought and scrupulously cherished.

"Not so long ago," he continued, "our colleges gave most of their attention in physical matters to the athlete, who least of all stands in need of special opportunity; but now every man has his chance, not only for that refreshment of body and mind which comes from wholesome sport, but also for the constant advice and surveillance of men skilled in the cure and prevention of disease. Many men are handicapped, through heredity or accident, by physical defects which cannot be wholly overcome, but it is an imperative moral obligation for every man to make himself as strong and robust as he can, to make himself the master and not the slave of the body and its demands."

There is much more I wish I might quote from Dr. Angell, but space does not permit. What I have given you shows how valuable is this contribution to the welfare of the young. I pray that these words may be read and pondered, not only by the youth of America, but by the teachers in the public schools and by every parent.

We must impress upon our young people that there rests upon each of them this moral obligation to be strong and robust. Too many times a weak body and ill health are the direct result of laziness, the failure to do the things necessary to have strength and abounding health. Let us heed Dr. Angell's suggestions.

Answers to Health Queries

T. Q.—How much should a girl aged 16, 5 feet 2 inches tall weigh?

A.—She should weigh about 115 pounds.

* * *

R. R. Q.—Is there any cure for wens other than having them removed?

A.—No.

J. K. Q.—How can I gain weight? I am lean and lanky.

A.—Proper dieting and deep breathing are most essential. You should eat nourishing foods and have plenty of sleep and rest. For full particulars send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and repeat your question.

C. B. Q.—What causes overgrown lumps in the flesh? I have one near the ear; could this be a tumor?

2.—What causes a numb feeling in the arms when asleep—the right one from the wrist down, but the left throughout?

A.—Without examination it would be impossible to advise you. Have your doctor diagnose after careful examination.

2.—Probably due to a circulatory disturbance. Application of heat and massage should be helpful. For further particulars send a self-addressed stamped envelope and repeat your question.

L. M. M. Q.—What will help me to gain in weight? I have been told to take six eggs a day and have tried it for one day, but do not feel satisfied as to whether or not the raw eggs would be beneficial.

A.—The eggs should be very helpful. They may be taken in the form of egg nogs with orange juice or in any way you find palatable. Too many eggs may cause biliousness. Gelatin is also helpful for putting on weight and building up generally. This may be taken in the form of desserts, flavored with pure fruit juices, etc. Building up the health in general will naturally help you to increase the weight at the same time. For further particulars send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and repeat your question.

For the Lovelorn

Peter Pan

DEAR MISS GALE:

First, I wish to thank you for the wonderful advice that you gave me in my last letter. I have tried to follow it as closely as possible, and I have at last come to some conclusion. Now, my troubles are not over; nay, they seem to be just starting. My sweetheart, Miss Gale, has one bad habit—that terrible curse to drink. He is a perfect gentleman at all times, under the influence of drink or not. He is a young man—25, to be exact—and it seems more than a shame that his life should be ruined in that way. Now, Miss Gale, I have taken the task upon my shoulders of bringing him through this crisis. He has vowed, almost put his life down, that he will not drink again, but, Miss Gale, he has no will-power at all. He leaves my house, promising to go to work again the following morning, but the morning brings only the same old story—not at home. Miss Gale, I love this fellow, and he intends to marry me. But, oh, I must have some advice about his drinking. Does he mean to do right? He says he can make a man of him. Do you think it possible? Please, Miss Gale, help me to solve this problem. He is a wonderful fellow. He does structural iron work and can make a good living for me and provide me with anything that I want. He loves me, and has begged me not to lose confidence in him. He has a rather roaming nature and every three or four months he takes a trip, just going wherever he can get. He always comes back, and he writes to me while he is away. Miss Gale, I again ask that you help me. If I don't win him away from his path, life is worth nothing to me. Please, please, help me.

PETER PAN.

You want me to advise you to take on the responsibility of reforming this young man, and that would be a foolish thing to do. I am quite sure you would be most unhappy with him. If he cannot give up drinking for you now, when he is trying to win you, he will never do it after he has "caught his car." And this habit of roving is a bad one in a husband, too. Had you thought how you will be situated when he does that after you are married? Find someone whom you can lean on a little, instead of planning to uphold this man's morals through life.

Ungettled

DEAR MISS GALE:

I have known a young man for two years, and have been company with him three different times. He is very respectable and I know he cares for me. He tells me I am his ideal girl. My parents are very fond of him and I think a great deal of his family. I am 20 years of age, but I have never been married. I thought I still have good times in mind and at different times I think I will meet a different life companion. Yet I know a better one than the first cannot be found. Several friends have told me that I will soon receive my engagement ring from this man. Shall I accept it if I am not sure? Do you think "love" is concerned in my problem? What shall I give this boy friend as a Christmas gift? Appreciating any advice given and thanking you, Miss Gale, I am,

UNSETTLED.

Don't dream of marrying this man, or of accepting a ring, until you are perfectly sure that you love him. Only unhappiness would come of that, my dear. You are too young to think you must marry this man just for the sake of marrying.

Slim Jim

DEAR MISS GALE:

I am here again for some of your excellent advice. Here is my trouble: I am in love with a young man two years my senior. Miss Gale, he did a dirty trick on me. He promised he would be out to my house a few weeks ago, but the day he was to come he called up and said he wouldn't be down, because he had to work. I met a friend of mine the other day and he told me that he saw the boy that was supposed to come down at a dance with another girl. Miss Gale, this made me feel very blue to think that he would be like that. I would not have felt so bad if he had told me the truth. My girl friend told me to tell him about it. But I am going to try to forget him. Miss Gale, do you think I am right or would you do as my girl friends suggested? I agree with you on all questions.

"SLIM JIM."

Give him the benefit of the doubt, and ask him about it. Perhaps the other boy told a lie, not he.

Should I?

DEAR MISS GALE:

I have been interested in a young lady for the last year or so and in my estimation have treated her with every due respect as long as I have known her. Have taken her out about once a week and also have called at her home many a Sunday night to spend the evening very pleasantly. Of late when I phone for a Sunday night visit the idea of staying in does not take to her very much and naturally I have been turned down. I have argued this point with her very much, explaining that there is no place to go, only having a car. However, her stubbornness seems to get the best of her and as usual I have to rely upon someone else to spend Sunday evening with, but when I phone to take her out she accepts time times out of ten. I really care a lot for this girl and she seems to like me, but how should I, at this point I hardly know, what to think of the young lady, as I am under the impression that she can have a fellow call on her any night and stay to a reasonable time. I have been thinking of taking her to a formal dance at a future date and am puzzled whether or not I should ask her. What is your opinion?

"SHOULD I?"

If this girl isn't interested in you enough to have her enjoy an evening with you at home, then she doesn't like you very much. Why pamper her by inviting her to parties under such circumstances? Find someone else who is really interested in you.

Mademoiselle

DEAR MISS GALE:

I have only read your interesting column for one week, since I have just been in Pittsburgh for that short time. Here is my problem: I am 22 years of age, therefore quite old enough to know my mind. I am to be married in one month. My fiancé is 25. I like him and respect him, but don't think I love him. But then I have never really loved any man. He has wealth, social position and everything a woman could desire. Our thoughts of each other are mutual. Everyone says it would be a perfect match. At times I feel that I can't marry him and at other times I know I can and really care for him. I believe I do, subconsciously, perhaps. But what shall I do? I have just come back to the United States from a three months' tour of Europe. I was so glad to see him when I returned. Surely that must mean I love him. But, oh, Miss Gale, I don't know. Please tell me what to do and thank you. Also, if it would interest the readers of your column, I do not believe in petting, drinking or smoking. Oh, no real lady does. It is vulgar and I laugh to think of the foolish women and girls who do. It shows their breeding.

MADEMOISELLE.

You had better put off your marriage until you are more sure of yourself, my dear. It is a serious step and not to be taken lightly, so don't do it unless you are positive you love this man.

Rhoda Jean

DEAR MISS GALE:

I want your advice. I am 18 years old. I don't believe in drinking, smoking or petting. I'm in love with a very nice fellow. He says he loves me and I love him but when he asks me if I love him how should I say yes? When he talks to anyone he addresses you as his wife.

RHODA JEAN.

If you think that the young man is sincere, then it would be all right to tell him you love him, when he asks you. But be very sure that he is not teasing you. Lots of boys think that it is very amusing to make a girl say she loves him, when his own intentions are far from serious.

SPORT COMMENT by JAMES J. LONG

EVIDENTLY John McGraw, manager of the Giants, is not in the least discouraged over his failure to get any real service out of such Pittsburgh pitching discards as Joe Bush and Don Songer, whom he picked up during the 1927 season with such poor results that he eventually dropped them again.

Despite these failures, McGraw is going to take a chance with two more Pirate cast-offs next season. One is Leo Mangum, whom the Bucs tried several years ago on the recommendation of George Whitted while the latter was playing here, and the other is Chester Nichols, who was with the Corsairs during parts of the 1926 and 1927 seasons.

PITTSBURGH bought Nichols in an emergency last year, being forced to pay a fancy price for him because several other major league clubs were after him at the time.

He reported with such a severely injured leg that several weeks elapsed before he could be given a real tryout. He could not get going at the time, and after another trial last spring he was sent back to the minors. The Giants obtained him from Jersey City.

Mangum never got very far with the Bucs. He also failed with the Whitesox, but later did such good work for Buffalo that one of McGraw's agents grabbed him. McGraw, probably talking for winter publicity, says he has high hopes for both flingers and feels that there are strong possibilities of making the Pirates regret their action in dropping the pitchers, particularly in the case of Nichols.

ALL fair-minded fans, of course, have nothing but good will toward the two pitchers and will be glad to see them come through in New York or anywhere else, but when McGraw sets himself up as a superior judge of baseball talent and undertakes to show that some other managers have made mistakes, it is enough to give close baseball followers a good laugh.

No one can deny McGraw's success as a manager, and his system of running a team may be the right one for getting the best results, but as a judge of ball players the Giant leader has come to be considered one of the poorest of the big show.

AT ANY rate, if you recall the mistakes McGraw has made in that direction you will find that more blunders are charged up to him than to any other pilot in the majors.

PLODDIN' PAUL QUITS RING AFTER DEFEAT

By WARREN BROWN,
Universal Service Staff Correspondent.

CHICAGO, Dec. 10.—"Ploddin'" Berlenbach, onetime light heavyweight champion of the world, passed out of the pugilistic picture here last night.

Bruised and battered, buffeted about at will by the rollicking right of Jack Delaney, Berlenbach's gameness carried him into the sixth round, though the beating he took was undoubtedly the worst of his great career.

Referee Jimmy Gardner halted the bout in the sixth at the solicitation of Delaney, who saw no purpose in shooting home any more punches on the helpless hulk that would not sink beneath the sea of rights and lefts.

In those slightly more than five rounds, Delaney had spent most of three in pounding Berlenbach to the floor, most of the next two in pummeling him methodically, and then, in the sixth, when Berlenbach, the reeling ruin of a once great fighter, flashed for an instant a punishing left, Delaney decided the show had gone far enough.

Once again he was the sharpshooter with the right, and once more Berlenbach sagged to the floor. He was up, of course, because they don't keep this Berlenbach on the floor, regardless of the state of the under-

"TWO-BITS we score."

That is the battle cry of Charlie Bowser's Pitt Alumni Greybeards, who battle the Golden Panther varsity of Pitt today in the Stadium, for the honor and glory of the game and the condition of the regulars who are to play Stanford on the coast New Year's Day and need a workout.

The Greybeards, with a host of former Pitt luminaries who have made football history at Pitt and given you and me many a sore throat by causing us to emit raucous shouts and cheers on cold and damp days, is confident of pushing across at least one touchdown and have hopes of another. They figure that Tommy Davies ought still be able to get away and that maybe Tiny Hewitt or Nick Colonna will be able to punch holes enough in the varsity line to make things highly interesting for the Golden Cats. The Alumni eleven will have men from teams of the past decade, though it is probable that the boys of the past four or five seasons will do most of the playing.

While the game is looked upon as a workout session for the varsity, it will not be a walk away. The cold weather and hard, hard ground will attend to that. In fact, the contest will have the general aspect of one of those contests west coast varsity elevens play with the San Francisco Olympic Club, except that the Greybeards have not had the opportunity of drill and practice that the Olympic players get. They have been working out since Thursday, however, and most of them, being college and high school coaches, were more or less active all fall. Chase, Wissinger, Templeton, Hangartner, Bowser himself, Davies, Jordan, Frank, Gustafson, McMillin—all these chaps have been coaching, and Hastings, Linn, Sack, Williams, Colonna and Hewitt are the sort who are always in good physical condition.

ALUMNI IN SHAPE

In addition, Jim Rooney, Chuck Detwiler, Jess Brown and Jakie Bohren will be on deck. The first two will be varsity men next year, and were ineligible this fall. Bohren and Brown have been playing professional ball this year and will be in good trim.

"The LONG COUNT" by Jack Dempsey

Former Heavyweight Champion's Own Story of His Near-knockout Victory in Return Bout with Gene Tunney.

CHAPTER VI.

AS TO whether I'll ever fight again—well, that's a little something I'll let the near future decide.

Frankly, I see no reason why I shouldn't climb back into harness if I feel the old call for action. This ring racket is my profession. It's my means of making a livelihood. So why should I abandon it at a time when I still can earn good wages—and still seem to have sufficient ability to climb back to the top?

Some folks have taken the attitude that I ought to hang up my gloves for all time. I guess they figure that I no longer can make the highest grade. Which is a laugh to me. For am I not exactly the same fellow who would be champion of the world today were it not for the "Long Count?"

If I hadn't got that long count in Chicago, I'd have won the battle. I'd be the champ, wouldn't I? And no one would be advocating my retirement then, would they?

So why should they suggest it merely because I was unfortunate enough to lose a battle in which I actually KNOCKED OUT a world's champion?

NOT YET THROUGH

I lost the decision to Tunney, yes. But I don't think I was disgraced in that defeat. Tunney was the luckiest man in the world that he came through on top. If I was good enough to force a world's champion to his absolute limit to retain his honors—

LINCOLN, Neb., Dec. 10.—(AP.)—Blue Howell and Elmer Holm, both of Omaha, were elected captains of the Nebraska Cornhuskers for 1928 at the annual football banquet last night. The vote was deadlocked and it was decided that the two players should serve as joint leaders of the Husker eleven next fall. Both were stars of this year's Cornhusker team.

CHILLY SAUCE
By CHILLY DOYLE

BASEBALL is to get a big play in New York for three days beginning Tuesday of next week. The annual winter sessions of the two major circuits will be held, these to be followed by the joint meeting, with Judge Landis in the chair of authority, ity.

SHORN entirely of swaps or deals these off-season gatherings are interesting to the magnates, players and fans, and as a rule the meetings produce some activity in the trading mart. The minor leaguers held their annual pow wows last week in Dallas, Tex. Many men of the big show were on the job to negotiate with the minor fellows, quite a few of whom will mingle with their major-league brethren in New York.

THE Pittsburgh club will be well represented in New York. Sam Dreyfuss is still in Europe on his honeymoon, but Barney Dreyfuss, Donie Bush and Sam Walters expect to be on the job to transact all business. The Pirate trio will leave Pittsburgh tomorrow.

THE Pittsburgh owner and his successful manager will be feted tonight by members of the "Amen Corner." Donie would rather make a speech to an umpire than to a gathering of fans, but he may say a few words tonight. Moreover, he will hear himself eulogized by other speakers.

BUSH and Dreyfuss probably will have many callers of David Harum leanings when they land on Broadway. It is an open secret that Donie would like to grab another seasoned performer or two. While there seems to be a feeling in the Pirate family that Fred Fussell, new lefthander, is a high-class flipper, it also is true that he has yet to show as a major-leaguer, despite his prowess in the Texas League. So Bush will not pass up any chance to land a pitcher who might be of aid in the general scheme of the 1928 club.

SKIPPED BILL McKECHNIE of of the Cardinals also will be on the job. Bill attended the various sessions of the Dallas meeting with other officials of the St. Louis club. After resting a day or two at home, he will head for the metropolis.

TARENTUM JACK ONSLOW, who who played a part in the 1925 successes of the Pirates, yesterday was signed up by McKechnie, Jack to have his customary role as coach in the Cardinal household. Onslow was one of Bucky Harris' Senatorial aids last season.

pinning which presumes to hold him up.

Unable to defend himself, Berlenbach stumbled around the ring, Delaney following deliberately, pausing the while to plead with Gardner to stop it, and finally Gardner did.

In his dressing room, after the bout, some one approached Berlenbach and asked for his gloves.

"No," said Paul, "I'll keep THESE.

"I've made my last appearance in the ring."

Thus passed Berlenbach, gamest of th game, passed as a Berlenbach should, on his feet, still willing in spirit, though wobbly in the legs.

And thus came Jack Delaney, triumphant to Chicago. A savage hitter with the right hand, this Delaney, as cool a worker in the ring as has been seen here since Gene Tunney departed for other fields. A methodical sort of a worker, and it seems too bad that there weren't more than 4,000 customers in the Coliseum last night to see him get under way.

The show, no doubt, was a bust financially. But it has historical value—or will have, if "Ploddin'" Paul doesn't change his mind.

By CARL W. SHATTO

"HOMECOMING DAY" will be celebrated at Duquesne Garden tonight when three ex-Pittsburghers, now wearing the spangles of the New York Americans, return to do battle with their former Pirate mates. In the Big Town lineup will be Lionel (Big Train) Conacher, former captain of the local icemen, Joe Miller, once guardian of Pittsburgh goals, and Alec McKinnon, wearer of Pirate livery in "them good old days."

"Homecoming Day" is to be celebrated in various ways. During the pre-game warm-up session the members of the Cleghorn clan will greet their former mates with much shaking of hands and kind words, and the fans wills give vent to expressions of welcome. After the face-off, however, things will be different. The players will exchange blows and hot shots rather than warm greetings, and jeers rather than cheers will mark the fans' reception for the "prodigal sons."

Unless the plans of the Pirates go awry, the homecoming festivities will end with the final gong—will end in that they will be converted into a celebration of Pittsburgh's first National League victory of the season. Rallying brilliantly after a disastrous start, the Bucs now have reached the stage where they can anticipate triumph without the aid of a shot of "dope."

The great advancement of Cleghorn's skaters is reflected in the attitude and expectations of Pittsburgh fandom. A fortnight ago a Pirate victory over any club in the league would have been regarded as a shocking upset. Today a Pirate defeat at the hands of almost any foe would be regarded in much the same light. Recent brilliant deadlocks with the powerful Boston and New York Ranger sextets have done much toward restoring the confidence of the wearers of the Black and Gold, and toward sweetening the sentiment of the cash customers.

The vote favoring a Pittsburgh victory, although one-sided, is not exactly unanimous. Some 15 stalwart out-of-towners arrived here late last night, and during a workout at the Garden this morning they expressed themselves as ready and willing to dispute the Pirates' nomination to the win column. When it is recalled that the Pirates have not beaten the Americans once in their last five engagements it becomes evident that the invaders should be taken seriously. Rough and ready battling has attended Pirates-Americans meetings in the past and there is no indication that the program will be altered tonight.

Although the starting lineups will shoulder the greater part of the burden, the outcome of the fight may hinge upon the play of Cleghorn's spare forwards. In recent fights the Pirate reserves have shown greater improvement than have the men they relieve. A combination attack by Drury and Rothschild gave Pittsburgh the deadlocking tally against the Rangers, and Sammy has attained such fine form that he and Herb have become an offensive duo of real merit.

Colean and Ake, who dole out comedy in wholesale lots, will entertain between periods.

touted heavyweights in action, whether against a man his equal or a man generally considered his inferior.

If you haven't attended boxing shows of late you will want to see Godfrey. It is almost worth the price of admission just to see him step into the ring, a bronze giant of 6 feet and more, weighing all the way to 235 pounds.

HIS manager, James Daugherty, apparently, is satisfied that Godfrey can take the measure of all and sundry, as he does not hesitate in offering Godfrey to the various boxing clubs of the land, on terms that do not take into consideration the reputation or capabilities of the foe to be selected.

This attitude keeps Godfrey busy—and on the whole is not a bad one. Quite a few of Godfrey's matches are set-ups, in that the opponent has no chance at all, but this can hardly be blamed on Godfrey who is willing to meet all comers. Fans who sometimes complain about lack of knockouts—an unsound complaint by the way—surely will contemplate Godfrey's visit here with glee as it is almost too certain that Soldier Jones is going to have a tough old time with Godfrey.

Jones will be remembered as the man who put Harry Greb down—flatter than Greb was ever knocked by anyone. That evening when Greb was lying propped against the ropes will live long in the minds of those who saw the unusual sight. Lingering longer in memory will be, not Greb's posture, however, but his gallant battle, up-stream, after he got his feet. He showed that night that he was gamest of the game.

SENATOR FRANK HARRIS through that great club, the "Amen Corner," which is a glorification and combination of many corners, to which all of us were accustomed in our boyhood days, has arranged a dinner this evening in honor of President Dreyfuss of the Pittsburgh Pirates and Owen Bush manager of the league champions.

It is really the first testimonial to either since the world series disaster. There is a good ring to an affair which celebrates a world series loser as well as a world series winner. Often too much stress is laid upon the loss of a world series, it seems here. The big achievement is the winning of a pennant over a long stretch of games. That is far more difficult than winning in a short series, where the breaks, often as not, have an important bearing.

SPORT COMMENT

being good enough, and later was glad to buy him back for $100,000 and George Burns and Mike Gonzales thrown in.

He also dropped Buck Herzog and bought him back later when he found he had underestimated him.

He thought so little of George Kelley that he gave him to Pittsburgh on two weeks' trial in 1917, and when Pittsburgh turned him back because the big fellow could not be made to exert himself here the New York commander sent him to the minors, only to buy him again two years later.

HE LET Dave Bancroft go when Dave was still the best shortstop in the National League.

He parted with Kent Greenfield and Eddie Farrell, a pair that any club would be glad to get if there is not some close business agreement between the New York and Boston clubs that will enable New York to get them back.

He even dropped Remy Kremer, now the best pitcher in the National League, as not showing enough promise.

Many others might be added to that list, but those named are enough to show how little license McGraw has to be talking about the "mistakes" of other managers.

AMONG the baseball deals discussed at the Dallas minor league meeting, and which may develop into a real trade or a double trade when the major league men gather in New York next week, is one between the Brooklyn and Philadelphia National League clubs.

Manager Burt Shotton of the Phillies says that though he considers Russell Wrightstone a valuable player, he is convinced that Russell never will make a first baseman and accordingly he is out to get a new one. If he does not buy a young first baseman within the next day or two he will attempt a deal with Brooklyn next week. He also wants a pitcher.

The Robins have three first sackers in Del Bissonette, Harvey Hendrick and Babe Herman, and it is said that Manager Robinson may offer to trade Hendrick and Pitcher Rube Ehrhardt or Doug McWeeny to the Quakers.

THERE is apt to be a hitch, however, when the Philly management is informed what Brooklyn wants for the two players, as it is said Robbie will demand Second Baseman Fresco Thompson or Outfielder Fred Leach, and Shotton has already committed himself as being opposed to any deal by Philadelphia that will mean the departure of either Thompson or Leach.

Shotton holds Thompson blameless for the trouble that arose from a report that Thompson had said he would quit baseball unless traded to some other club.

"Thompson is not to be blamed for that," said Stuffy McInnis' successor. "I came to know him well in the International League, and he's an honest, straightforward fellow. He will always be welcome with the Phillies."

and if he needed a kindly referee to save him in the seventh round—well, where's the logic in the advice of some that I ought to quit because I'm getting a bit ancient, athletically speaking?

At this time my plans as to the future are rather indefinite.

The big thing I want right now is a good chance to loaf. I'm going to help myself to a nice vacation before I do any planning about the future.

I've been whizzing around for nearly eight months without a real stop. Last April I went into early training in California. Then I went east and did some tough training. Then the Sharkey fight. A fast jump to California, then to Chicago—and more training. Then the Tunney fight.

After that I went to California for a short time, then went on to New York for the legal battle with Jack Kearns. With that out of the way, I'm all carefree and footloose—at last.

So I can just loaf—and that's what I'm going to do.

As to fighting again—and when—well, that all depends upon Tex Rickard and what's what in the heavyweight division.

WOULD FIGHT TUNNEY AGAIN

Rickard's tournament may uncover some tough youngster—and Tex may want me to take him on, the winner to mix it with Tunney. If so, I may be entirely agreeable to fighting another aspirant late in the spring or early in the summer.

On the other hand, I may decide about that time that maybe my fighting days are done—and that I'll fight no more. But that sort of decision depends a lot upon Tunney. If he's willing to give me another smash at him, provided I'm the outstanding of the aspirants—well, I may not be able to resist the temptation.

I am not quite the agile individual that I used to be when I was 24 or 25. But I have not grown a full set of whiskers yet. I still can punch, and still can take it. And that, plus a little luck, and some 100 per cent counting is about all I figure I'll need to whip Gene Tunney—if we ever meet again.

The Ship's Siren Sounds As Georgie Hears the Truth About Ernest

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Ann and Georgie Hastings, sisters, live together in Mrs. O'Leary's boarding house. Ann, the elder, works in a factory and Georgie in an insurance office. Ann is proud of her sister's good looks and charming manners and pleads with her to accept the attentions of Bill Warren, who is madly in love with her, and to have nothing more to do with Ernest Brooks, a chance acquaintance who has been rushing her. Bill makes a confidant of Ann and proposes to Georgie, who refuses him. Ann's solicitude for her sister ends in a quarrel between the two, and Ann becomes conscious that she herself is fond of Bill, and the day after the quarrel he asks her to have lunch with him. During lunch he shows he is still devoted to Georgie, and Ann asks him why he doesn't call on her sister that evening. Bill comes to the boarding house and after waiting for Georgie sees her arrive with Ernest. Georgie vindictively tells Bill she doesn't care if she never sees him again, and in desperation he turns to Ann and asks her if she would be willing to go out with him now and then. Ann discovers that Bill has been drinking and shows her great disappointment in him, but resolves to do all she can to help him. Meanwhile Georgie, in a spirit of adventure, goes to call on Ernest in his studios. He proposes a trip abroad with her, promising to marry her when they get to Italy. Georgie leaves his studio, telling him that was impossible.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

GEORGIE thought of the story Mrs. Mountford had told her—the story of her love affair, before she had married. Had Ernest been the man? But no, she had said she was a relative of his? Georgie felt confused—she would find out everything sooner or later, however—she promised herself that!

From outside a faint echoing voice ran through the passages, a voice warning the visitors to leave the ship.

Mrs. Mountford rose and knocked out her cigaret.

"Hear that?" she said. "Sorry, but I've got to cut our little interview short. What can you do for me, Ernest?"

For a moment their glances met, and it was as if they exchanged some private messages. Ernest Brooks seemed to yield. He drew out a slim black checkbook, and meditatively regarded it.

"This is a holdup," he said in a low voice.

"I told you I wouldn't stand for that sort of talk from you," she exclaimed.

"Well, you'll have to, if you expect me to pay—"

Mrs. Mountford's small fists were clenched. She was breathing hard. Her eyes were like coals.

"All right," she cried. "I wondered what you'd say to that—and I wonder what you've said to this fool girl."

For the second time the voice in the corridors warned all visitors to leave the ship. "Last call! Last call!"

But Mrs. Mountford did not seem to hear as she whirled to face Georgie.

"This man," she snapped, "is my husband. That's why he isn't going to marry you. He wouldn't if he could, but he can't!"

Georgie stared, unable to speak. "But—but your name—"

Mrs. Mountford gave a short laugh. "I chose it myself," she said with a kind of wild flippancy. "Do you like it? . . . Don't you believe what I've told you is true. Ask him. No, just look at him."

"It's a lie—don't believe her." Ernest Brooks wet his lips with his tongue. But he looked down, he looked up, he looked anywhere but at her. And Georgie knew, beyond questioning, that Mrs. Mountford had, after all, told her the truth.

At the same instant there rose upon the air the shrill, vibrating sound of the siren.

CHAPTER XXVII.

ANN'S effort to win a declaration of love from Bill had resulted only in her own humiliation. She had gone to Hollis Park with him after that unfortunate dinner at Rivard's where she had seen Georgie with Ernest Brooks and she had fled in confusion after her unfortunate talk with Bill.

Her pride was broken and she felt ashamed and miserable. For the first time in her life her own problems had obscured all other considerations. She even forgot about Georgie and Ernest, little dreaming that her sister was even then playing with the idea of going abroad with Ernest.

She began to torture herself with thoughts that had somehow a strange pleasure in them. She would never see Bill any more, never hear his laugh, or see his quick, serious frown, his boyish perplexity. He would be just a name and a memory—she would never see him from now on.

But when she had thought this, she returned once more to wondering why he didn't like her as she liked him. And she knew then that she had no intention of saying good-by to him. She had no intention of giving him up.

She must make him like her, she must somehow! Without him, life wasn't worth the living. Georgie didn't want him. She never would want him. She preferred sleek, handsome men like Ernest Brooks, men who drove fast cars and lived gay lives. She scorned Bill, thought he was a mere boy, and laughed at all his dreams of future greatness, ignoring the clean honesty of him, the staunchness and loyalty in his heart.

Ann tried to think of some means, some miracle, that would hurl Bill into headlong devotion.

She was angry that it was even necessary. But it was necessary. Perhaps it was always necessary and only in novels did girls find men they loved terribly in love with them.

Did girls have to be clever to win a man's love? Did she have to wear slinky clothes, smoke cigarets in long holders, and flaunt earrings. If she ever did any of those things, Bill would take one startled glance at her and run for his life.

She smiled at the absurdity of her picture even in the midst of her worrying. Of one thing she was certain. If only from curiosity or simple vanity, Bill would appear very soon. When he did, what was she to do? Show him still further how deeply she cared, and have him treat her with tender indifference? Not that! But how could she ever hope to keep the telltale look out of her face, her eyes, her trembling lips.

When the noon whistle blew the next day she sauntered out of the office. Jimmy McCormick joined her, jostling his way through the crowd to reach her side.

"Hello, Ann. Where have you been keeping yourself."

His big, good-natured face, with its look of strength and health, had glowed with pleasure at the sight of her. She, too, smiled, glad of his friendly warmth.

They walked together towards the gates. He took her arm to guide her through, and said one of the rare, funny things that came from him every now and then with surprising suddenness. She looked up and laughed.

Then the laugh went out of her, and a curious stiffness went through her, so that she felt it was difficult even to walk.

Just outside the gates, Bill was waiting—waiting for her.

"Ann, I wanted to see you. Just dropped around to have a chat with you."

There was a trace of condescension in his voice, a hint that he suspected he was giving her a great treat. And in a flash, in a twinkling, Ann knew by instinct exactly what it was she must do, exactly what she had sought to find out last night in her endeavor to hit upon some means to make Bill like her.

"Ever so sorry, Bill," she said. Strange how calm her voice was, how clear her brain raced! She felt suddenly unconquerable. She glanced ahead towards Jimmy, who had moved on and was evidently waiting for her.

"You see," she finished, "I'm lunching with—with a friend." She said the word softly, mysteriously.

"What do you mean, Ann? You mean that big guy who was with you. You're going out with him."

"Yes."

"Well, come on and eat with me instead."

"Some other time."

"Are you afraid to break your date?"

"Not a bit afraid, Bill. It just happens I don't want to."

He looked puzzled, he looked even startled. Her pulses jumped to see that look come into his face.

"But you told me last night," he blurted out, "that is, you let me understand—"

She laughed, a clear, ringing laugh. By instinct again she found the right words, said without a trace of scorn so that he could never have suspected their insincerity.

"Bill, darling, do you mean to tell me you took me that seriously!"

His jaw dropped. "But listen—I mean—see here, Ann." He gave it up and started all over again, the pride knocked out of him for good. "Do you mean to say, Ann, you don't like me a bit?"

"Of course I like you. I'm quite fond of you." Quite fond of him! Ah, if he only guessed.

"I mean really like me."

"Yes, of course I do, Bill."

"Do you like me as much as that other fellow?"

"Don't be silly."

"Well, answer me then."

"Why should I?"

"Because—because—oh, I don't know."

His distress was so complete that she could not keep up her cool-brained pretense any longer.

"Oh, Bill, you don't know how much I like you."

The warmth had gathered in her tones, had swept her scheming, her calmness before it. She wondered if she had said too much. She must wait—wait—wait until it was safe to show him she did care like that!

But he was smiling, he had sighed with relief.

"Listen, Ann. Ever see a baseball game—one of the big ones, I mean?"

"No—but—"

"Well, I've got a couple of tickets. Friend of mine gave 'em to me. Right down in section C. Let's go, it's Saturday, you know."

Her brain sped swiftly now. She fought her own desires back, telling herself she must think, she must reason with calculating shrewdness.

"That's funny, Bill."

"What is? What do you mean?"

"Oh, nothing. Only I can't go. Why don't you take somebody else?"

"I don't want to take anybody else."

"Well, I'd love to go with you, but I—"

"You what?"

"It doesn't matter."

"Say, what's happened to you, Ann?"

"What do you mean?"

SAY BLONDE "DIDN'T KNOW"

PAINESVILLE, O., Dec. 10.—Velma West, 21, says she didn't know her husband, Edward West, 26, was killed by her hammer blows when she raced away from their Perry (O.) bungalow and went to Cleveland to play bridge, Sheriff Edward Rasmusen of Lake county revealed today.

It appears that considerable point will be made of this when the young blonde widow is ushered into court here Monday for a preliminary hearing on the first degree murder charge against her.

To prove first degree murder the state must prove premeditation. The allegation that she left him not knowing he was dead would be a considerable contribution toward an argument that she didn't intend to kill him; that she hit him over the head with a hammer in "blind rage" and self-defense.

Mrs. West insists the remark which threw her into a fury was her husband's criticism of one of her Cleveland girl friends, a hair dresser, according to Rasmussen's account of her confession.

"I'm going to leave you and never come back," the widow said she shouted at him.

West, who had been lying on the bed, was aroused by her shout, and he got up from the bed and struck at her, according to Rasmussen's version of her story.

When West swung at her she grabbed up the convenient hammer and brought it down on his head, the story continues. Then she hit him again and again with the table leg, bound him hand and foot and drove to Cleveland after changing her clothing.

Enjoy Yourselves, Vassar Teacher Tells Co-Eds

Girls who go to college for a good time have the right idea, Dr. Annie Louis MacLeod, head of the department of euthenics at Vassar, said yesterday in her address to students and members of the faculty of the University of Pittsburgh in Soldiers and Sailors Memorial Hall. Dr. MacLeod said that education may mean culture, preparation to earn a living, or a good time, the last being the best, since we all seek happiness.

The average college girl lacks a sense of values. This along with health and a feeling of power are necessary to happiness. The real purpose of education is to supply all three, the speaker said.

Needy's Hopes Rise As Fund Grows

Thinly clad, and with cold homes, the poor suffer keenly when the mercury drops around zero, as it did yesterday. When they are practically penniless and unable to buy fuel, like most of the Twenty Neediest Cases for whom The Sun-Telegraph is collecting a Christmas fund, their situation is pitiable indeed.

It may be asked why they keep up the fight against poverty. Why, it may be asked, do they not admit defeat, sacrifice pride, and seek the comfort to be found in the poor house, the orphan asylum, the institutions for the aged? The answer is that these are cases in which aid at this time may tide them through the critical period, save the family from disruption and the children from being institutionalized.

If the breadwinner in these cases is sick there is hope for his recovery. If he is in prison, there is hope that he will take care of his family on being released. If he is dead or hopelessly disabled, there are others in the family—growing children, perhaps—who can soon be counted upon to earn wages.

The Volunteers of America reports a case aided by that organization which shows what can sometimes be accomplished in a seemingly desperate situation. The husband was—and is—serving a four-year sentence in the Western Penitentiary. The mother was ill and had five children to care for—the oldest a girl of 12, the youngest a baby of four months, born after the father went to prison. The mother tried to struggle along, but finally became so ill that she had to go to bed. So she lost the position on which she depended to earn enough money to maintain the home and keep the children. That was the situation when the Volunteers of America learned of the case. It looked hopeless. The mother was ready to surrender. There seemed no alternative but to put the children in a public institution.

But the Volunteers gave aid. They helped the family with food, clothing, fuel and medicine. They furnished assistance for five months, and by that time the mother had recovered her health and strength. Remunerative employment was again found for her, and she now reports that they are getting along satisfactorily.

It is desired to help in a similar way the Twenty Neediest Cases. It is desired to raise for their benefit a large fund, with which to furnish them the necessities of life until they become self-supporting again. It is for that that contributions are asked.

The Twenty Neediest Cases have been reported by the Associated Charities, the Catholic Charities of the Diocese of Pittsburgh, the Pittsburgh Association for the Improvement of the Poor, the Salvation Army and the Volunteers of America. Checks and money orders should be made payable to the "Twenty Neediest Cases Fund" and sent to The Sun-Telegraph, or, if preferred, to one of the societies named.

All of the 20 cases were described in The Sunday Sun-Telegraph of November 27. One case will be repeated each day. Here is case No. 13:

A family of five in destitute circumstances on account of ill health of both father and mother, the children, three boys, aged 6, 4 and 2, are in need of food and warm clothing. The mother goes out to work when she is able to find someone who needs help for a day or two a week. She is not able to do more on account of her tuberculosis condition. All five are undernourished and in dire need and living in two rooms. Eight hundred dollars would put this family on its feet and provide the mother with the kind of food she needs to build up her body and fit her to care for her family.

(Reported by the Volunteers of America).

Case No. 14 will be described tomorrow.

The Ship's Siren Sounds As Georgie Hears the Truth About Ernest

"I mean, you're different somehow. You're not the way you used to be."

"Well, I'm awfully sorry about that, Bill. But it can't be helped, can it?"

And with a little laugh that was in itself irritating, she had said goodby and joined the waiting Jimmy.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

"JIMMY, are you doing anything this afternoon," asked Ann.

"Well, as a matter of fact, I was. Why?"

"I wanted you to take me to the baseball game."

He smiled broadly, deeply pleased.

"You wanted me to take you there, Ann? I wish I could. Wait a minute—let me think."

He cupped his chin with his hand and then nodded. "I guess I can make it."

"Thanks, Jimmy."

"Well, you don't often give me the chance to take you anywhere. I'm glad to do what I am doing."

She smiled gratefully, yet without understanding what it was he meant.

"You're sure you can get tickets?" she asked.

"Oh, sure."

"Well, Jimmy, will you try to get them in Section C. Section C—remember?"

He looked puzzled, but he did not ask any questions. She liked him for that.

She lunched with Jimmy, and liked him still more. What a kind, unselfish spirit he had. And the solemn way he listened to the least of her remarks, his constant worry as to her comfort and happiness—these were agreeable things to note.

Bill, that wild young egotist, had no such thoughtfulness . . . but she loved Bill.

They arrived early. Glancing over so covertly around she could see no sign of Bill. But then she had not realized that a single section could contain so many people. It might be easy to miss seeing him at all.

Then at last she saw him. He saw her at the same instant. She waved and smiled. He glared at her in indignant surprise. His gaze passed on to Jimmy and returned to her. All at once he looked away. Thereafter Ann sat watching the baseball game. She sat watching it with her arm through Jimmy's, her shoulder against his. Now and then she looked up and asked him questions. She seemed to find a good deal to laugh at in his answers.

And all the while she was hating herself. She hated the necessity of this trick, the insincerity that seemed to cheapen the pure gold of her love. And presently something happened that made her feel more remorseful still.

Jimmy leaned toward her. "I wouldn't have missed today for anything," he whispered. "It was worth not going out to the boss's gold club at his special invitation. He was sore, but what do I care."

So Jimmy had done that, had broken an engagement that might have meant much to him, for her sake. And she was using him, deliberately using him to make Bill jealous. She tried to put the thought from her mind. She was afraid if she considered it too long she would suddenly confess, tell the unflattering truth, just to be honest and square with Jimmy McCormick.

The game was over. The big crowd moved at a snail's pace towards the gates. In the press of figures she lost sight of Bill. Jimmy took her home, and she went inside feeling indescribably blue.

She had hardly opened the door when she was called to the 'phone. It was Bill. He was angry, he scarcely knew what he was saying.

"You certainly stood me up. The next time I ask you to . . ."

"Bill, please! Please listen! Come around tonight. Come on around. Won't you?"

She coaxed him. He was obstinately silent, but she knew by instinct her coaxing was music to his ears now. She was exultant. Things were going just as she planned.

"Of course if you don't want to," she began when the silence had held just a second too long.

"Oh, of course I'll come around," he broke in gruffly. "I'll be there—right after dinner."

He was there much too early and sat in the living room reading a magazine. Old Colonel Montgomery winked at her with a devilish look that had belonged to his youth. The two spinsters from upstate surveyed her with round blinking eyes, as if she were some new specimen.

And she dawdled over her dinner, talked coolly, laughed and took her time. Where was Georgie? She didn't know, and she wasn't even curious tonight.

Then she went out to join Bill, holding one slim hand out to him.

"Let's get out of here," he said hoarsely.

"Where do you want to go?"

"Oh, I don't know. Anywhere. Only out of this place. I feel as if everybody were looking at us."

"You're only a kid, aren't you, Bill?"

He didn't answer, but his lower lip actually trembled. They strolled out of the house. It was a fine, quiet night, with many stars but no moon.

They wandered down the street together, and crossed towards the park. There were benches there and shrubbery and silence. There were the stars and the soft night air.

He walked moodily with long steps that took her breath to match.

He said violently and abruptly:

"So you knew you were going to the ball game all alone—with him?"

"Well, Bill, I told you I couldn't go with you."

"Yes, but you didn't tell me you were going with him."

"But what difference did it make?"

"None to you, I guess."

"Bill, did you come out here just to quarrel with me."

"I'm not quarreling with you. I'm just telling you what I think, that's all."

She smiled at him now, smiled as she might have done at a petulant child, perversely refusing to make friends, perversely wounding himself.

"A lot I care!" he interjected with a sudden laugh.

"Bill, if you don't mind, I think I'll go back to the house now. We might as well say good-night."

Then his last defenses were shattered. He turned to her beaten, and with a look of despair.

"Ann, don't leave me. I'm sorry to be acting like this. But I'm lonely and nobody seems to give a hoot for me. And I—I can't even talk—I can't even tell you—"

"Tell me what?"

"Tell you that . . . I love you."

Love's Embers

Absorbing Sequel to "Revelations of a Wife" — By ADELE GARRISON

Philip Veritzen, With a Slight Caress, Betrays a Tender Feeling for Madge

FOR the last half-hour of our drive to the inn among the hills overlooking the Hudson, there was no word spoken in the great car which, piloted skilfully by Otto, Philip Veritzen's chauffeur, was rushing us to smoothly and swiftly over the highway.

Each of our little group ostensibly was engaged in looking at the exquisite beauty of the roadside, but I guessed that Philip Veritzen was distinctly sulky over Lillian's subtle dating of him as of her own generation instead of mine. That Lillian was absorbed in rueful thoughts of the injustice she had done Mary Harrison, I also was certain, but for myself I steeled my mind against any troubling thoughts and gave myself up to the pleasure of the outing. It was one that was not likely to be repeated soon, I told myself with a grimly humorous comprehension of Philip Veritzen's probable regret that he had extended the invitation to me, and as Lillian's presence assured me that I had no annoyance to fear from the subtle little audacities of Philip Veritzen, I had nothing to mar my thorough enjoyment of the day.

We had left the main highway and were steadily ascending a comparatively unfrequented road, not so well paved as the main one, but still not rough, and making up for any deficiencies in its construction by the beauty of the woodland and occasional charming, old-fashioned farmsteads which bordered it.

Upward the road wound among the hills, and through occasional vistas we caught sight of distant water and of other woodland and houses on the other side of it. And then the road widened and curved, and there appeared before us a picturesque stone wall with gates of hewn rock, the whole covered with trailing vines and serving as the setting for a big rambling building also covered with vines and surrounded with balconies which, almost hidden by a cluster of protecting pines and oaks, fitly capped the hillside.

That there were other people besides Mr. Veritzen who knew of the place and appreciated its beauties was proved by the many motors parked in the ample grounds. As Otto drew our car to the steps and we alighted, I looked at our host undisguisedly puzzled.

"Where do all these cars come from?" I asked. "We saw none on the road."

He laughed in amused fashion. "Just come over to the other side of the balcony," he suggested. "Of course, Lil, you know the answer."

"No, I've never been here before," she answered, and then we reached the other side of the house and saw that several hundred feet below us, the winding road over which we had come joined the main highway. Stone walls and hewn rock gates, even more massive than those through which we had come, separated the wooded grounds from the road.

"This is the front of the place," Mr. Veritzen said. "We could have come here along the highway, but I detest traffic, and, as I told you before, Otto is a wizard at finding roads free of it. The way was less direct, but I think we made better time at that than if we had kept to the main road."

"I am sure we did," I assented, my eyes upon the crowding hurrying motors on the thoroughfare far below us. But the answer was given absently, for I was reveling in the beauty of the place. Mr. Veritzen put his hand upon my arm and turned me away from the veranda railing.

"I'm not going to let you spoil this with a half portion," he said. "There's a view upstairs from the top balcony where we're going to have dinner which will reward your waiting."

The gesture and words were natural enough, and the next instant he had dropped his hand from my arm and returned the greeting of a smiling, rotund man, evidently the proprietor of the place, who himself conducted us up the stairs to the topmost balcony. But there had been something possessive, lingering, almost caressing in the touch of his fingers. Yet it was so vague and elusive a thing that I could not resent it without making myself ridiculous.

Hurry

By Lucy Lowell

HEY, there, friend! What's your terrible rush? Tumbling along like that with your coat flapping in the wind and that wild look in your eye—where you going?

To catch a train? Well, what of it? Supposing you do miss the first one? There'll be another along in two minutes, won't there? And is two minutes saved worth the way you feel now—all out of breath and full of confusion and about as unfit to start a good day's work or put over a business deal as anybody possibly could feel?

You can rest a bit when you get where you're going, you say? But that will take time, too, won't it? Why not be a little more leisurely now, give yourself a little fairer chance and eliminate the necessity for resting later on? A few minutes' idleness may restore your body to normal, but someway I don't believe it will iron the wrinkles of haste and confusion out of your mind.

"Haste makes waste," is more than just a saying. Haste may pull you through your day, but it will waste you. Give yourself time to breathe, friend.

Cleanse the blood, bowels and liver with Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the successful substitute for calomel; there's no sickness or pain after taking them.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets do that which calomel does and just as effectively, but their action is gentle and safe instead of severe and irritating.

No one who takes Olive Tablets is ever cursed with a "dark brown taste," a bad breath, a dull, listless, "no good" feeling, constipation, torpid liver, bad disposition or pimply face.

Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound mixed with olive oil; know them by their olive color.

Dr. Edwards spent years among patients afflicted with liver and bowel complaints and Olive Tablets are the immensely effective result. Take nightly for a week. See how much better you feel and look. 15c, 30c, 60c.

CALLES FEARED INTERVENTION BY UNITED STATES

$100,000 MORE SENT FOR SENATOR

Calles in February, expressing the opinion that the Mexican Executive's fears of a rupture with the United States were "well founded." In this letter Elias hazarded the conjecture that "this rupture will be followed by armed intervention, which undoubtedly would carry us into war."

It includes, next, secret official correspondence concerning a proposed payment to a United States Senator of $100,000, including a Treasury Department order signed by President Calles for the payment of this sum, and a letter and a telegram, both from Calles to Elias, explaining that Mexican finances would only permit the payment of that sum to the Senator, instead of $250,000, as recommended by Elias.

The Senator named as the proposed recipient of this sum is one of the three Senator named in official Mexican documents published in preceding articles of this series as the proposed beneficiaries of a payment of $1,200,000, which Elias reported to Calles as made through an alleged go-between, on August 14, 1926. It will be recalled that the Mexican government ordered $500,000 to be given one of the three Senators, and $350,000 each to the other two Senators. The Senator who was ordered given the larger sum last year is the one named by President Calles in his letter proposing the payment of $100,000 in March of this year.

The Calles letter to Elias inquiring about the prospects of a break between Mexico and the United States was written January 29, 1927, when relations between the two countries were strained because of American intervention in Nicaragua for the purpose of checking the Mexican-inspired "Liberal" revolt there. An English translation of the letter follows:

Mexico, D. F.
January 29, 1927.

Senor Don Arturo M. Elias,
Consul General of Mexico,
New York, N. Y.
My dear brother:

This will be delivered to you personally by Santiago, who is the bearer of a verbal message of importance for you. It is therefore important that you answer this by him.

I have confidential information to the effect that in Washington they are preparing a rupture of relations with my government. Please make a personal investigation into this matter, informing me in detail by personal messenger, so that with your report in view I can take the measures you may believe necessary to confront the situation which is coming upon us.

As ever, your brother who loves you,

P. ELIAS CALLES
(Hand-written)

SG/PEC/L.

Elias Concurs

Elias replied promptly, under date of February 7, 1927, saying that all that Calles feared might come to pass, and more, namely, armed intervention and war. Elias added that Manuel C. Tellez, the Mexican ambassador in Washington, "is of this opinion" and closed with the statement that if the situation should become serious he would "send out of the country all books and archives of importance."

The financial agent's letter is quoted:

New York, N. Y.,
February 7, 1927.

Senor Plutarco Elias Calles,
President of the Mexican Republic,
Mexico, D. F.
My Dear Brother:

With pleasure I answer your letter of January 29, to inform you that I consider that your fears are well founded, and that you should be prepared for every emergency. This is my frank answer to your questions.

I base my opinion on observations made during the last two months. I have noted that in many well informed circles they speak not only of a probable rupture of relations with our country, but they even affirm that this rupture will be followed by armed intervention, which undoubtedly would carry us into war. Tellez (Mexican ambassador to the United States) is of this opinion and probably will have advised you thus, as he is in position to size up things in the Capital more correctly than I, who am distant.

If the situation should become extreme, I beg you attentively to inform me immediately, so that I can send out of the country all books and archives of importance and withdraw all official and personal deposits from banks, putting everything in order for departure at the first notice.

The bearer of this letter will deliver separately an accounting of the personal sums which you have sent me during the last three months. I am ordering that these funds shall be concentrated in this financial agency, to be disposed of at the first notice.

With a strong embrace, I remain your brother.

Situation Strained

The diplomatic situation between the two countries continued delicate through February and March of this year. On March 18 Financial Agent Elias cabled President Calles, in code, suggesting the payment of $250,000 to a person referred to by Calles in his reply, on March 19, as "our friend."

The Mexican Executive's reply was cabled in code. The Hearst papers have the code message and its decoded Spanish text. In it Calles stated that the national treasury was not in condition to permit the transfer of the sum requested by Elias, and observed that "our friend" ought to be satisfied with $100,000.

The deciphered text of this code telegram follows:

Mexico, D. F.
March 19, 1927.

Arturo M. Elias,
Consul General of Mexico,
New York, N. Y.

Your code telegram of yesterday. The Treasury is not in condition to permit transferring the sum you request for our friend. I am ordering the Treasury to transfer you only one hundred thousand dollars, with which I believe our friend will be satisfied. Await my letter with explanations. I salute you affectionately,

P. ELIAS CALLES.

Cuts Amount

The letter of explanation promised by Calles was written on March 30. In it the Mexican Executive repeated his telegraphic assertion that he was unable to comply in full with the recommendation made by Elias for the payment of a quarter of a million dollars to an American Senator. He explained that, in view of the unfavorable economic situation of the Mexican Government, it was not in condition "to make large expenditures for propaganda purposes.

"I believe," President Calles wrote, "that what has been spent to date will be more than sufficient to sustain the friendship of those who aid us."

This original letter, with the handwritten signature of President Calles, is in the possession of the Hearst papers. It will be delivered to Congress for investigation, with the name of the Senator intact.

Mexico, D. F.
March 30, 1927.

Senor Don Arturo M. Elias,
New York, N. Y.
Dear Arturo:

I am answering your attentive letter of the fifteenth and telegram of the eighteenth to say to you that in view of the economic situation in which the National Treasury finds itself, we are not in condition to make large expenditures for propaganda purposes. I believe that what has been spent to date will be more than sufficient to sustain the friendship of those who aid us; for this reason your latest request of $250,000 for ——— is reduced to $100,000 only, which I believe will be more than sufficient for the purpose you indicate to me.

Sees Peril Gone

I believe sincerely that the conflict (or danger of conflict) which we were expecting already has passed and there is no peril in sight at the moment, but it is always convenient to be prepared and to observe closely the maneuvers of our enemies, now that the American Congress has adjourned. If you believe that it should be necessary to make one or another expenditure, to be in touch with the situation, you can do that without consulting, always taking into consideration the economic conditions in which we find ourselves.

With a strong embrace from your brother, who loves you,

P. ELIAS CALLES,

SG/PEC

The Hearst papers also have the original Treasury Department order, signed by President Calles, directing the transfer to Elias of the $100,000 mentioned by the Executive in the foregoing letter. This order, dated March 27, 1927, was issued by Calles in response to a communication from the Secretary of the Treasury, Luis Montes de Oca, requesting him to ratify an order already issued, on March 25.

Oca Is Balky

Montes de Oca, it appears from the desired order of ratification issued by Calles, wanted his superior to repeat both the name of the proposed beneficiary and the amount he was to be given. The refusal of Montes de Oca to act on the first order may mean that he disapproved of it and took the most tactful method of indicating his disapproval. If so, Calles took no heed, for he immediately repeated his instructions.

The Hearst papers have not the original Calles order of March 26, or the Montes de Oca letter of inquiry, but they have the Calles duplicate order of March 27, with the hand-written signature of the Mexican executive. It is quoted, textually:

To the Citizen Secretary of the Treasury and Public Credit:

You will please order the Citizen Treasurer General of the Nation to transfer by telegraph the sum of $100,000 (One hundred thousand dollars) to be delivered by him to Hon. ———.

This order is issued in ratification of Order No. 5186 of March 25, in response to your communication of yesterday asking verification of both the quantity and the beneficiary.

You will please conduct this operation with the greatest discretion, charging the amount to secret expenditures of the Executive.

EFFECTIVE SUFFRAGE
NO RE-ELECTION.

The National Palace, Mexico, D. F., March 27, 1927.

The President of the Republic,

P. ELIAS CALLES.

Have Original

One more original document is held by the Hearst papers in connection with the Mexican government's proposed payment of $100,000 to the United States Senator referred to by Calles as "our friend." It is an order directing the Department of Auditing and Revision of Foreign Accounts to handle the bookkeeping entries and accounting on the item pertaining to the transfer of the money, without requiring receipts or proofs of payment. It follows, textually:

To the Chief Clerk of the Controller's Department.

By direction of the Citizen President of the Republic you will please order the passage by the Department of Auditing and Revision of Foreign Accounts, and without the corresponding receipts, of Expediente No. 18,253, corresponding to Authorization No. 5,186, from the Presidency of the Republic in favor of Arturo M. Elias, Financial Agent of Mexico in New York, for the sum of $100,000 (One hundred thousand dollars) to be charged to secret expenditures for pro-Mexican propaganda and to be delivered to Senator ——— by our said Financial Agency.

SENATE PROBE OF EXPOSE OPENS

der charges of having obtained his nomination and election through fraudulent and corrupt means and the expenditure of a vast campaign fund. The entire membership of the Senate demanded that the shadow of suspicion shall be lifted from the body.

Bristling with indignation and his voice shaking with emotion, Senator David Reed arose to a "question of the highest privilege" and presented his resolution. Virtually every seat in the Senate was occupied and the galleries were crowded. A hush fell over the chamber as Reed recited the charge which he said "cast a cloud upon the integrity of every man who sits as a member of the United States Senate" until it is cleared up.

The Senate shot the resolution through with the briefest discussion. Immediately, Vice President Dawes appointed as a committee of inquiry, Senators Reed, Jones of Washington, Johnson, California, Republicans, and Robinson of Arkansas and Bruce of Maryland.

Reed promptly called the committee together in a nearby committee room for a preliminary meeting. It was decided after an hour's session that the first public hearing will be held at 10 o'clock next Thursday in the minority room in the Senate office building.

During the meeting, Assistant Secretary of State William R. Castle appeared before the committee. Nothing was divulged as to what transpired, but it is known that a number of subpenaes were issued. Among them, it is understood, is one for Arture Elias, Mexican fiscal agent at New York, who is alleged to have handled the $1,215,000, which it is charged was intended for the four senators. A number of executives of the Hearst newspapers, as well as John Page, author of the articles, are understood to have been subpenaed by the committee.

The resolution, as presented by Reed, authorized the expenditure of $25,000 to conduct the investigation. Because of a statute which requires such funds to be passed upon first by the Contingent Expenses Committee, the money provision was temporarily withdrawn, but the sum will be authorized when the Senate meets next on Monday. Senator Keyes of New Hampshire, chairman of the Expense Committee, called a meeting on the Senate floor and reported the resolution back before the Senate adjourned.

The preamble of the resolution recited that the Washington Herald had published a "photographic copy of a letter purporting to evidence the payment of large sums of money to three senators of the United States by the government of the Republic of Mexico, for the purpose of influencing their official action."

The resolution provided for the appointment of a committee of five to "immediately investigate what moneys, rewards, or things of value have been given, promised or offered to any senator or senators of the United States by any government or official or any foreign power for the purpose of propaganda or the purpose of influencing the official act of such senator or senators.

Following the committee meeting, Senator Reed said that he had no idea who the accused senators may be, but declared that whoever they are he intends to see that the cloud is lifted from their names.

Politics Hit Wall St., the Tonic Needed; Swope's Gift

By B. C. FORBES

ALL but a few die-hards are now convinced that President Coolidge has definitely taken himself out of the race. His emphatic statement has caused keen disappointment in financial circles. It is entirely possible that this disappointment will be further reflected in the security markets by and by.

Eastern men of large affairs regret that Charles E. Hughes has also said "No." However, they admire Secretary Hoover's tremendous industry and ability. They are disposed to doubt if he will prove acceptable to machine politicians. The South favors Hoover among the Republican possibilities.

In financial circles one hears more about Vice President Dawes than about ex-Gov. Lowden. So far no other Republican names have received serious attention.

It is generally admitted that Gov. Smith's stock has been rising. Gov. Ritchie, of Maryland, made a strong impression upon a very large and influential gathering of New Yorkers he addressed at a banquet the other evening.

From now on, politics will be more of a factor in Wall street.

GEORGE F. BAKER'S health is none too robust. This has tended to delay formal action by the United States Steel Corporation's directors regarding naming James A. Farrell as chief executive and selecting a chairman of the finance committee.

ONE young middle westerner whose conspicuous activities have been attracting attention is R. G. Dahlberg, who has rapidly built up quite a gigantic business by transforming the fiber of sugar cane into a product now largely employed in place of lumber, called celotex. The demand has been so overwhelming that Mr. Dahlberg has taken to raising his own cane, selling the sugar as a by-product—an interesting reversal of the old order.

Yesterday Gov. Martin, of Florida, broke ground at Clewiston for a $2,500,000 sugar mill for Dahlberg's Southern Sugar Company. There was much rejoicing. Floridians vision tremendous sugar growing developments in the Everglades.

"On some of our 40,000 acres in the Everglades," Mr. Dahlberg told the gathering, "we have already raised from 75 to 80 tons an acre, against 25 to 30 tons elsewhere. Instead of our cane being of the normal height of 10 feet or less, our Clewiston plantation gives us cane averaging 16 feet."

That is another vivid illustration of the kind of competition entering various industries—competition, not from within, but from entirely different industries, from new products, from new processes. Few basic products are today without competition.

"ON many farms which I know, the taxes are more than the rental value of the land under existing conditions," James M. Withrow, a responsible citizen of Moorhead, Minn., tells me. That's bad.

DO executives take a real interest in their work people? Read this:

Gerard Swope, president of General Electric, has just donated $25,000 out of his own pocket to establish a loan fund for the benefit of employes of the company who attend Union College, located at Schenectady, the company's headquarters.

The directors have matched President Swope's gift with another of the same amount, available to employes or sons of employes, with no restrictions as to the college they may wish to attend.

By the way, when Swope was a student at Boston Tech he took vacation jobs which covered his overalls with grease and grime. He mastered shop work before he entered selling. In this field he made such a mark that he rose to the top at an extraordinarily early age. His forte—in addition to technical knowledge—is handling men harmoniously.

THE big guns at Washington from President Coolidge, Secretary Mellon, Secretary Hoover, down the line, are bombarding the country with extremely optimistic annual statements. Secretary of Commerce Hoover's report attracted special attention because of its favorable facts and figures.

But what many people overlooked was that this report covered the year which ended June 30. It's since then that business has slowed down its pace.

Secretary Mellon now points out that this slackening of production and consumption has paved the way for improved consumption and demand in coming months. The veteran banker Mellon is richly entitled to be regarded as a mature judge.

PERHAPS the best tonic the stock market could receive would be the endorsement of two or three of the proposed big railway consolidations now before the Interstate Commerce Commission. The market has been acting as if it needed a tonic.

Lone Star's Bulge Attracts Sales

Lone Star Gas settled back slightly this morning from the high point reached on the sudden upturn in the shares late yesterday. The stock started the session today at a fraction above $55 a share, but it was evident that yesterday's spurt had attracted sales which had a moderately depressing effect.

Several hundred shares were offered and bid prices naturally fell back in the face of the selling. The recession was orderly, however, and while there was some effort to impart some speed to the decline, the supporting orders just under the market acted as a cushion and prevented anything in the nature of a severe break.

The newly listed William Zoller Company common and preferred shares were in fair demand, especially the junior issue, which jumped 2 points following the opening at 30. The small amount of this stock outstanding and the fact that offerings have been very light are factors favoring the up side on the issue.

NEWS AND VIEWS

Government Wins O'Fallon Decision.

According to reports from Washington, the Department of Justice was today advised by the United States district attorney at St. Louis that the Federal Court there has sustained the valuation made of the St. Louis and O'Fallon Railway by the Interstate Commerce Commission. It is expected the Interstate Commerce Commission will order the carrier to pay to the government $226,475, this being half the excess earnings the commission decided the carrier had in the years 1923 to 1926. For other carriers, the prospect is clear that demands for excess earnings in amounts many times as great will be forthcoming, although final payment will not be met until the litigation can be carried to the Supreme Court of the United States for confirmation or rejection of the commission's policy.

American Rolling Mill has never pooled patents with any concern, Mr. Verity said, in connection with a former report that these two concerns were to develop continuous mills under a joint ownership of rights.

STOCK MARKET CONTINUES RECOVERY

NEW YORK, Dec. 10.—(AP.)—The recovery in stock prices was continued at the opening of today's market under the leadership of the motor, food and copper shares. Calumet and Arizona opened 2½ points higher, the first sale of Nash Motors was a block of 5,000 shares at 97, up 1, and initial gains of a point or so were recorded by Mack Trucks, Reid Ice Cream, Loose Wiles Biscuit and Hudson and Manhattan.

Operators for the advance, acting on the theory that the recent reaction had sufficiently corrected the market's weakened technical position and that credit and business conditions warranted a further appreciation in the quoted values of many issues, started to bid up stocks in all sections of the list. Several blocks of 1,000 and 7,000 shares changed hands in the early trading. United States Steel common rallied more than a point to 143¾, or 5 points above yesterday's low, in the first few minutes of trading.

New peak prices for the year or longer were registered by Nash Motors, Packard, Greene Cananea Copper, Wright Aeronautical, American Steel Foundry, Freeport Texas, Porto Rican Tobacco B and McCrory Stores preferred.

Foreign exchanges opened firm, with demand sterling unchanged at $4.87½.

CHICAGO BOARD

CHICAGO, Dec. 10.—An all-around advance in grain values took place today following unusual steadiness displayed at the opening. The entire list of Chicago quotations showed no change exceeding ¼c in either direction, but Buenos Aires wheat market opened ½ higher and this stimulated buying here. Starting at the same as yesterday's finish to ¼c off, Chicago wheat soon scored a moderate general advance. Corn opened unchanged to ¼c up and then rose decidedly. Oats paralleled the action of corn. Provisions were easy.

The following quotations on the Chicago Board of Trade are reported by A. E. Masten & Co.:

MR. FRISBY ISSUES OPEN LETTER TO BOY SCOUTS

Cornered, but confident, Mr. Frisby rocked political opponents today, and put Wall Street into a panic, when he suddenly reached into his brief case and brought forth an open letter to the Boy Scouts of America. For several minutes Frisby winked slyly at press representatives who crowded around him, and at stenographers who stood on tiptoe straining for a glimpse at the people's candidate.

The historic letter follows:

Boy Scouts of America and others to whom the name "Frisby" symbolizes all that is worth symbolizing will be interested to know that I have indorsed the Boy Scout movement. I take it that the plan of doing a kind deed daily is a novel idea, and well worth trying. I remember when I was a boy and took great delight in being kind to old ladies, and no one can ever say that Frisby ever struck a dumb animal when he was down.

Yours truly,
G. WASHINGTON LINCOLN FRISBY.

After reading his letter, Frisby elbowed his way past the dwindling crowd, caught a street car and waved goodby. In a moment he was but a memory.

A MAN'S HOME IS HIS RASSLE.

ACCORDING to the old English law, a man's home is his castle. According to the modern American law a man's home is his rassle. He has to stand by day and night to repel invaders. But Federal Judge Killitts hopes to change this. Well, it doesn't cost a nickel to hope.

THE judge has just dismissed a case against Edward Mueller, a farmer living near Delphos, O., charged with having liquor in his home, on the ground that the Federal officers entered this man's castle without a search warrant and ransacked. The officers probably were so dazed by the importance of their work that their orientation became scrambled and they thought they were in Russia.

"The time has come," said Federal Judge Killitts, "for this Government court to lay down emphatically to Prohibition agents the fact that there is a higher and more sacred law than the Volstead Act or any prohibition law, and that is the sanctity of the home. That law is written into the Constitution. I am forced to instruct dry agents that they must not, under any circumstances, go into a private residence without a warrant and must not accompany officers of other jurisdictions without a warrant."

So, the property owner has some rights. There are times when we almost forget.

THE snoops have been in the saddle for so long that the ringing words of Judge Killitts come like a ray of hope. The public has become so accustomed to being ridden and exploited that it looks back to the old Puritan days of stocks, ducking stools and branding irons with a feeling akin to yearning.

In certain Pennsylvania communities the reformers urged their followers to play detective and snoop upon the neighbors by peering in at windows and report all they saw at headquarters. "This," said the reverend gentleman upon that occasion, "is the highest form of citizenship." We hesitate to imagine what the lowest form of citizenship might be.

In the same localities an effort was made to pass a law providing that all window curtains be left up at night so that no man might take a drink, play a game of cards, dance or kiss his wife without being found out.

The well-known privacy of Mr. Cobb's goldfish is the only sort that some reformers would allow. Happily their reign is nearing an end. The old red sand is running through the hour-glass and the whangdoodle is calling for the snoops.

THIS idea of a man's home being his castle seems a fairly good one, although it did originate in England (with due apologies to Mayor Thompson). It is difficult to get into an Englishman's home. And latterly, since women's rights have been so prevalent, some Englishmen cannot get in themselves after midnight.

But when he does get in and hangs out the S. R. O. sign he is fairly safe. There are no enforcement agents hanging down the fireplace to watch him at his flagon of ale and his game of bridge.

Judge Killitts would like to introduce that state of affairs in this country, and we believe he is going to succeed. With the snoops and busybodies on the run and headed for the tall timber, things are looking up.

This is going to be a free country, too, some day. You can stick a pin in that.

ON "WET WEAK-ENDS"

MAN is a strange ANIMAL.
He takes a COLD PLUNGE
And his whole big BODY
Feels FIT!
He goes out and gets only
His FEET WET, catches a
COLD as the result, and
Gets completely disorganized.
It seems it's a matter Of BRAGGING.
If ALL MEN ran around
And TOLD everybody how FINE they felt when they Got their FEET WET,
They would KEEP themselves
WARM, well and BUSY.
Instead, when ONE
END of them only gets
WET, the other end starts
To WORRY itself sick.
WOMEN are DIFFERENT.
Many a girl would rather Get WET FEET than wear
Goloshes,
VANITY keeps women
WARM,
But ask some girls to Take a COLD PLUNGE,
And they would nearly DIE
Of shock. FEAR makes
FOOLS of us all!

Make Driblets a Flood And Save Cook Forest

I think that I shall never see
A poem lovely as a tree.
JOYCE KILMER.

The tree is the noblest friend of man. It affords him shelter, comfort and beauty. It protects him from the wild winds and holds the life-supporting soil of the world from being washed into the seas.

Romance, sentiment and history are associated with the tree—the Cedar of Lebanon, the Charter Oak, the stately elm of New England, the mighty redwood of California, the gorgeously flowered magnolia of the South.

California prizes highly its few remaining stands of gigantic trees. Pennsylvania still has a grove of noble trees, virgin white pine in Cook Forest. Let us preserve this last remaining stand of virgin forest.

The Cook Forest Association, striving to raise funds to complete the purchase of the forest for a state park, still lacks about $70,000. People are interested and contributions have been coming in—in driblets.

There have been a number of $1 contributions from lovers of nature. One school raised a contribution among its pupils. If those driblets became a flood the forest would be saved to the people of Pennsylvania.

Action must be voluntary, since there is no time for an organized campaign. The money must be in hand by the first of the new year. Save Cook Forest—our loveliest poem, as it was composed by the Creator.

Value of Common Sense Revealed in the Message

This week President Coolidge made his annual report to Congress on the state of the nation and his recommendations for legislation.

As usual, his message is characterized by sound, conservative common sense.

The President naturally puts in the forefront the outstanding achievements of the Harding and Coolidge administrations: Debt reduction and tax reduction.

When the national debt was at its maximum, it was 26,600 million dollars, and it cost us 1,055 million a year in interest. On next June 30 the national debt will be down to 17,975 million dollars, with interest charges of only 670 million dollars.

There is nothing in the financial history of any country to equal this cut of 385 million dollars in the annual interest charges we have to pay. It is a leading reason why our taxes could be successively cut until now only two and a half million people in the nation need pay income tax. The President is right in demanding Congressional support of his policy of economy.

The people will approve the President's demand for a strengthened national defense: Decent housing for the army, new submarines, airplane carriers and cruisers.

With respect to our foreign relations, President Coolidge lays emphasis upon development of our relations with countries in this hemisphere. He wants Congress to authorize the postmaster-general to pay liberally for mail contracts, making possible a "western hemisphere air mail." He wants our national road program linked up with Canadian and Mexican through highways, and he wants American engineers and American finance to assist in upbuilding the entire Latin-American road system.

The people will approve the President in thus directing our attention to countries on this side of the water, who are our natural friends and allies and our natural market.

Agriculture, he urges, should be aided by a revolving fund to assist co-operatives to market their products. Liberal appropriations are to be made for the Mississippi flood districts and the development of our waterways. The West will rejoice in President's recommendation that:

"Legislation is desirable for the construction of a dam at Boulder Canyon on the Colorado River, primarily as a method of flood control and irrigation. A secondary result would be a considerable power development and a source of domestic water supply for Southern California."

Nothing in the President's report is more important than his reiterated demand for the establishment of a separate Department of Education and Relief, headed by a member of the Cabinet, charged with the duty of directing Federal aid to the cause of education.

With the people the influence of President Coolidge's recommendations remains great. That is a reason why Congress should carefully study and heed his words. Another reason is the sound common sense in what he says. Still another reason is the excellent results obtained by following his guidance in the past.

Clean Up War Hangovers

President Pierson, of the United States Chamber of Commerce, is right in contending that the return of alien property seized during the war would enhance our nation's reputation for fair dealing.

It is true that under our treaty with Germany, German property seized here may be retained until "suitable provision for the satisfaction of all claims of American citizens against Germany shall have been made."

It is also true that under an earlier treaty both nations had agreed that private property should remain inviolable in war. War strain proved too much for that ancient compact.

But now that peace and reason have resumed sway, it is for the best interests of both nations to clean up these war hangovers as speedily and as generously as possible.

The Hearst Papers Advocate:

1. An agreement of English-speaking peoples to preserve peace among themselves and to promote the peace of the world.
2. Proportional representation in the United States Senate, no state to have less than two Senators. Legislation to enforce prompt constitutional reapportionment in the House of Representatives.
3. A separate Department of the Army, of the Navy and of the Air Forces, all united under a Secretary of National Defense.
4. Federal action to the limit of Federal powers to abolish illiteracy in the United States under a Secretary of Education.
5. Election of Congress in November. Installation on the 1st of January following. Inauguration of the President 1st of January next after November election.

"TONIC, PLEASE!"

Garrett P Serviss Says:

Hudson Bay

ONE of the most fascinating romances of the first navigators of the great western and southern oceans is the history of the discovery of that remarkable inland sea known as Hudson Bay, which, in the far north, offsets the tropical Gulf of Mexico. There, on the edge of the icy Arctic, Hendrick Hudson, the discoverer of New York Bay and Manhattan Island, and the Hudson River, seeking always a way to Asia around the northern end of America, perished amidst the ice floes, in an open boat in which his mutinous crew had turned him adrift.

Hudson's entry with his ship into that great cul de sac, which seemed to him so sure a highway to the Pacific, and his vain search for a western exit from the vast trap into which he had sailed, make an irresistible appeal to the imagination and the sympathy of the reader. The tragic end of the first white man who ever trod the soil of Manhattan Island, or saw the frowning Palisades, the blue Catskills, and the wood-crowned hills around the site of Albany, is not an event to be forgotten, especially by the inhabitants of the enormous city by whose wharves flows the grand river bearing Hudson's name.

The river has had a foremost place in the eyes of the busy world almost from the day its discoverer first sailed up its romantic stream, but the great bay in the far north has remained known to but few except geographers and explorers, being associated in the minds of most people only with the frozen and uninhabitable Arctic.

But now a brighter day is promised for it. A Hudson Bay railroad, grain shipping ports on the shores of the bay, and a direct line of steamers to Europe, are in contemplation in Canada, and an expedition is reported to be examining on the ground the practicability of using Hudson Strait for navigation in all seasons. Hudson Bay lies in about the same latitude as the Baltic Sea, and there are those who dream of the possibilities of building up with the aid of agriculture and commerce, a great empire centering about its shores.

Perhaps this is an enterprise suitable only to a future age. Geology, or meteorology, may make it possible through some great alteration in the crust of the earth, or in the composition of the atmosphere, such as seem to have taken place in the past. If, as the facts revealed by exploration indicate, there was once a time when temperate and even tropical vegetation and other forms of life flourished close around the north pole, then there is no positive reason for denying that a similar condition may recur.

One can imagine upon fairly sound grounds some revolution of that kind which would make of Hudson Bay and the vast well-watered country surrounding it, a populous and wealthy region, a new section of the civilized world, where new fortunes would be deployed, new capitals built, and perhaps a fresh start made by humanity.

Once Overs

Let It Come Out

THERE are times when you experience a great urge to give to the world some fine sentiment you feel.

You seem overflowing with ideas that you think would help others to get over the rough places more pleasantly.

You long for ability to write or to speak well.

You can't do either, so you smother the ambition to be heard.

Many others have had the same feeling at some time.

It is a matter of regret to themselves and to others that so many with fine ideas cannot command words to express them.

There are so many who have the vocabulary who have so little worth saying.

If you have some new and original thoughts and cannot express them as well as you wish, why don't you select someone to whom to tell these facts?

If they are valuable to the world entrust your thoughts to one who will share the profits with you.

But don't be disappointed if you find that these thoughts are not well-received and are not considered as valuable as they seem to you.

Stranger Than Fiction

TWO women, alike in age, in maiden name, in marriage name, in tastes, and so closely resembling each other that friends mistake them—what comedy material for a Shakespeare!

And yet the two who have just discovered their resemblance—the Mrs. Elsie Knapp Forbell, who lives in Newark, and the Mrs. Elsie Knapp Forbell, who lives in Douglas Manor—are not related.

Truth has a way at times of surpassing fiction.

Ye Towne Gossip

by K. C. B.

I HAVE been taught.
THAT IT IS the duty.
OF A gentleman.
WHO SITS at a table.
IN A public place.
WITH LADIES present.
IF IT happens.
AN ACQUAINTANCE comes.
AND STOPS AND talks.
TO AT once rise.
AND KEEP his feet.
UNTIL THE caller.
SHOULD HAVE bowed good-bye.
AND THE other night.
I WAS sitting there.
IN A public place.
AND A man came along.
IN EVENING clothes.
AND STOPPED a moment.
AND I stood right up.
AND THEN I discovered.
HE WAS the head waiter.
AND I sat down again.
AND ANYWAY.
BUT THAT'S no matter.
THE DINNER was served.
AND ANOTHER man.
HE CAME along.
AND ONE OF us knew him.
AND I arose.
AND WE all shook hands.
AND HE started to tell us.
ABOUT SOME party.
OR WHATEVER it was.
AND I said to him.
SO I could sit down.
"WON'T YOU bring a chair?"
AND HE said no.
HE'D JUST be a minute.
AND AT THE end.
OF THE first five minutes.
I SAID to him.
"IF YOU'LL pardon me.
"I THINK I'll eat."
AND AGAIN I sat down.
AND A few minutes later.
HE WENT away.
AND JUST as the coffee.
WAS BEING served.
AN OLD couple stopped.
WHOM WE all of us knew.
AND THE white haired lady.
SAID TO me.
"IF YOU dare to get up.
"WE'LL GO right away."
AND I reached right over.
AND TOOK her hand.
AND HELD it in mine.
TILL SHE went away.
AND THEN I found.
THAT MY coffee was cold.
AND THAT is that.
I THANK you.

BE A PITTSBURGH BOOSTER
To Your Friends in Other Cities

NEW YORK, Dec. 10.—The Bowery struggles bravely to throw off its cloak of squalor. And in the past three years has made more progress than all other streets. While it still has the glowering manner of the down-trodden, here and there the new and opulent touches peep through.

The Bowery, in many ways, is New York's most distinctive street. It stands out like one of Hogarth's slum etchings. Next door to where a miserable humanity tries for sleep in lodging house cubicles will be a glittering cafeteria dazzling with lights.

Or next door to a dim-lit greasy mission ladling out soup to shuffling outcasts will be a radiant flower store selling orchids. Always the effort of the Bowery is to lift its head. Its upstairs 25-cent hotels have such names as the Plaza, the Ritz and the Chatham.

Across the street from where "students" in a barber college attempt to remove dirty gray stubbles from dry leathery cheeks is a beauty parlor called "The Aphrodite"—flashing with mirrors and white with a marbled magnificence. For the Bowery is not all poverty.

It has millionaires—often richer than residents of Park avenue. One sees movies criss-crossed with gaudy posters of thrillers, six-for-a-quarter post card photos, sawdust hash houses with window chalked menus and then one sweeps up to the Bowery Savings Bank—one of the richest financial institutions in the world.

The Bowery has lost its swing-door saloons and the law and rule of the bungstarter. But in its cellars are still rancid dives with odors that cannot be conquered by formaldehyde. Rot gut whisky and third-rail gin are still served to the bindle stiffs.

Tattooing parlors near Houston street floss up the arms of gobs. Penny arcades ring with a shooting gallery rat-a-tat-tat and beefy blondes flash spangled tights in burlesque halls. But the Bowery improves—slowly but surely.

Chatham Square, the doorway to Chinatown, is at the southern end of the Bowery and Cooper Union at the other. Originally it was a cow path to the Bouwerie—the farm given that name and owned by Peter Stuyvesant, the last of the Dutch governors of New Netherlands.

The noisiest tenement in New York is in Chatham Square, a triangular red brick building traversed on all sides by the clattery-bang of elevated trains. The effect would be like sleeping in a boiler factory.

The famous "bread line" of the Bowery passed out a year after prohibition, although bread and coffee are still served to those who attend nightly service in missions and "flop" in dingy back rooms.

* * *

The most curious sight in Chinatown is a funeral procession. On the hearse sits a man who throws showers of printed prayers. These, fluttering in the wind, are to confuse the devils. At the grave there is left for the dead a sumptuous meal consisting of roast pig, chicken and rice and the corners of the grave are sealed with red wax—also to keep out devils. Funny people—these Chinese.

* * *

In the elevator of a building that houses a famous woman astrologist, two sacks of mail were in the corner.

She gets that much mail every day," said the operator.

Movie and stage people are said to be the most consistent patrons of the astrological parlors. Wall Street financiers are also steady customers.

A young lady walked across Forty-second street yesterday with a cub bear on a leash. I wonder what they will think up next. On second thought I don't believe I care much.

Life After Death

By DR. FRANK CRANE

A gentleman writes me a letter, from which quotations are as follows:

"The other day my wife died. She was 39 years old. She was a martyr to her duties and to her children.

"After 19 years of marriage and hard work, this wonderful wife and wonderful mother, who never complained, was taken from us.

"Now is the time when she could have taken life more easy and could have enjoyed the growing up of her children while preparing herself for old age.

"In two days she is gone. My duty towards the children will keep me going and going strong, but I feel the need for something that shall keep me going on myself.

"I would like to know if there is a reason for such happenings and furthermore that the deceased one is happy in another life. Please hear the cry of a spiritual man left in the middle of life (I am not yet 49), deprived of the only one faithful companion and with nine children, from 18 to two and one-half years. I have the feeling that no other woman can ever enter my life.

"I need a number of thoughts that shall satisfy me mentally and emotionally that everything is for the best and some certainty as to the life after death."

There is no certainty of the life after death. That is a matter that must be taken on faith and hope.

Of it we have a reasonable hope.

Those who live the higher life, that is above the animal, all have a feeling of another life.

While the Scriptures do not positively teach another life they assume it, as Christ says, "If it were not so I would have told you."

Honor, patriotism, self-sacrifice and devotion reach out into another life. In this life they are often thwarted.

What the Almighty's reasons were for taking this mother we cannot say. No one knows. But the best plan from any point of view is to go on assuming that He had a good reason. Nothing can be gained by giving up.

If we believe in the high purpose and devoted life of the deceased we shall ourselves participate in them.

If there is another life and the deceased is cognizant of our doings here, she cannot but be gratified to know that we are living up to our ideals.

The devotion of this mother has faded into a memory, but that memory will continue to inspire and bless her children and her husband.

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS

Joy of the Sun

I AM drenched with the joy of the sun,
I am rugged with golden wine,
All the beauty and bounty of Earth,
All the rapture of living are mine!
For I have been out on the hills
Where the footprints of man are few,
And I have seen sky and fields
With a vision grown glad and true.
There the gold of the sun shone down
And it wrapped in its shimmering veil
All the world with a brightness and bliss,
With a promise that could not fail!
Of the Infinite Fountain of life,
Of the Source of all strength it told,
And the message of world beyond world
Was borne down on its rays of gold,
I am drugged, I am drenched with the sun,
I am burned with its kiss; I desire
No guerdon of gladness or gold
Save the sun and its life-giving fire!

Right Angles

By ALEXANDER CAIRNS

Good Head

ONE momentous day a young man of 23 was sitting in a restaurant in Paris. He watched a madly oncoming mob and set it down immediately and correctly as some 6,000 people.

Following his seldom-erring impulse, he turned to his companion, "Let us follow the rabble."

They climbed to a place of visual vantage on the terrace bordering the river. And there this youth was an eye-witness of the outrageous and scandalous scenes which followed.

He was shocked with indignation and could not excuse the insults to royalty. Finally the King appeared at a window, wearing a red cap of the mob.

Then our young man cried out in indignation:

"What madness! How could they allow that rabble to enter? Why do they not sweep away four or five hundred of them with cannon? The remainder would take themselves off very quickly."

Later, as the two young friends sat at dinner the intrepid youth analyzed the whole situation and told of all the outcome as it ultimately occurred. He foresaw with sagacity and reasoned logically.

That youth of 23 was Napoleon Bonaparte, the one destined to take the place of the fat and lazy king.

That prophet-like ability was certainly enviable.

We concede without quibble that Napoleon was saturated with genius; that his was no ordinary mind; that he is probably the only man in history with 10 feet of mind in five feet of body; that the star-of-destiny premise never came so near proof as in him; and that there is something uncanny in the alleged answer of his when asked why he shot down the mob in the streets of Paris, and he replied: "I did it to save human life."

But speaking the parlance of the street and the day, the very evident secret of such foresight is mental acquaintance with the problem in hand.

The man who surprised the world with wise action in a crisis was not taken by surprise at all. He had calculated on that particular contingency long ago and had decided exactly what he would do.

When the weather man guesses correctly it is no guess at all but a scientific finding as accurate as gravitation.

A good head is a head with all the data properly analyzed and synthesized.

LISTEN, WORLD! ELSIE ROBINSON Says: Life Is Too Easy

LIFE'S too easy for most of us.

We have too many push buttons to do the things for us which our granddads did for themselves with the sweat of their brows and the heave of their biceps. As a result, an increasing number of us are sitting around, picking our souls and raising Cain. Talking smart and acting naughty to show how brave and free and advanced we are. Pooh!

Crime wave? There's something worse than a crime wave happening to this country. There's a laziness wave, a softness wave, a smartness wave, that is going to do more harm than all the robbery and murder put together.

Too many theories about living—too little actual life.

We talk about struggle—what do most of us know about struggle? I know a lot of emancipated, educated young women who put up an awful yelp if they're asked to "struggle" through one evening alone at home with the baby. And a number of our most dauntless young males who'd faint if they had to struggle for 10 minutes with a spading fork.

"But we can hire people to take care of babies and spade gardens," they say.

Agreed. BUT YOU CAN'T HIRE PEOPLE TO CREATE SELF-CONTROL FOR YOU, OR PATIENCE OR PERSISTENCE OR GRIT.

No one ever experienced life by paying someone to do it for them. Or by reading about it—or talking about it—or by going through a lot of smarty motions while someone else pays the bills.

THE ONLY WAY YOU CAN EXPERIENCE LIFE IS TO GO OUT AND HAVE IT BUST YOU ONE IN THE JAW.

Face hunger—face poverty—face dirt—face ridicule—face sacrifice—face hard work—face failure—face loneliness and monotony and discouragement and danger—and death. DARE TO BE CRUCIFIED AND TOTE YOUR OWN CROSS!

If you don't, you're going to go out with the first big wind.

Americans didn't need to be told this once. Americans were poor and despised and forsaken. They had been kicked out of England. They had to root hog or die. And out of that rooting in actual mud, and spiritual loam, came a Vision. And out of that Vision came a Nation. A red blooded Nation. A Nation with a backbone and guts.

And now we, their push button descendants, expect to cash in on their efforts. We can't do it. We can't live on second hand spunk or fourth generation sweat.

LIFE'S TOO EASY. LOOK OUT AMERICA!
